EPORTER GOES O MILWAUKEE ND TELLS WHY

ribune Writer on Neighborly Visit.

JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
Milwaukee, Wis., June 16.—[Special.]—Why I came to Milwaukee:
Because it is our nearest neighbor ng the great American cities.
Because it has a special individuality nd a highly developed conscience.
Because its inhabitants do not go ng up and down Wisconsin avenue (the main street) as if the devil s after them. A genial city.
Because its picture gallery contains e Wood Gatherer" (known in ge as "Father Jacques, the dman") of Bastien-Lepage, that ter who died too soon and whom e Bashkirtseff loved.
Because Judge Shaughnessy has ght insolent and dilatory lawyers 9 a. m. means 9 a. m., and has h prisoners understand the social ughby behind their sentences.
Because the Milwaukee Hunt club s to the best pack of English fox- nds in America—the late Lord illiam's pack, recently brought from Yorkshire.

German Influences Great.

Because Milwaukee is the best place the United States to study the sur- l of those German influences—al, social, and industrial—re- ed by conditions which culminated e revolution of 1848.
Because long streets of workmen's small salaried men's houses are tifully treed. A veritable boule- one of them is.
Because I could hear a striped n laughing at a lion. 'Tis very d.
Because the fumes of its motor e are drawn off through the roof the bus instead of blown into the e of the passengers.
Because Milwaukee industry—which colossal—is assimilating the man- ect of the college of engineering Marquette university and because n Kartak and Prof. Frommelt me why.

Collects Ashes from Basement.

Because this is the only large city the United States which collects s direct from the basements of es.
Because in forty-eight years its pub- library has grown from 26,000 mes to more than 800,000. Any with such a record is bound to interesting.
Because John Cudahy, Master of Foxhounds, talks so well—and s better.
Because the streets are clean as a r, and the alleys as clean as the rlo—even cleaner!
Because the best monument to Cath- n Beecher—great teacher and pio- r, and Henry Ward Beecher's sis- is the noble demesne, at once n and scholastic, of groves, halls, seums, and ivy mantled towers of aukee-Downer college for girls, ch she, inspiring it with her ideals education by and for women, ched on a great career. Its en- faculty is composed of women rep- enting eight European and thirty- American universities.

Built by Sacrifice.

Because the best monument to ther Caroline, founder of the teach- order of School Sisters of Notre e in North America and a mem- le figure in the early annals of ation in the middle west, is the e stateliness of the class rooms, ratories, and chapels of Mount y college, two million dollar plant h the sisters built out of—God s what! Sacrifice, I think.
Because typical of the speedy justice Milwaukee's Municipal court is the ance of a crime of violence com- ed at 6:30 in the morning, for crime the accused was in Wau- prison at 3 o'clock in the after- of the same day.
Because Mr. Heller, head of the Mil- kee zoo, who was Theodore Roose- 's naturalist in Africa, knows so —and will tell some of it.
Because to see the Melchisedec win- in the south wall of St. John's edral is worth a day's journey.
Because Robert Lawrence Cooley— and "the greatest schoolmaster in world"—lives and works here and talk by the hour; he held me spell- and for seven.

Collects Bail Bonds.

Because in the forty years of John ler's service as assistant deputy clerk of the Municipal and Dis- courts the loss in forfeited bail s has been only $1,500. There is lesson for Chicago in that record.
Because the present activity of the

OVER 7,445,000 SHARES SOLD AT $2 TO $22 LOSS

"Rich Men's Pets" Suffer with Rest.

Everything Goes Down

Bonds, grains, cotton, live stock and metal prices followed yesterday's collapse of stock prices.

Prices of listed bonds went down, with some of the convertible and warrant bearing issues reaching new lows for the year.

Grains sold down to new levels. Wheat options, December excepted, were dragged below a dollar a bushel, July touching 95⅝ cents.

Climaxing a steady two week decline, steers sold in Chicago at price levels not reached since March and April of 1927.

BY FRED HARVEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 16.—[Special.]—Wall street's stock market today fell crashing to the lowest price levels of the year.

Sales on the big board totaled 5,657,320 shares, while a total of 1,788,100 changed hands on the curb, a grand total of 7,445,420. The stock ticker was fifty minutes behind at the close.

Shares of leading corporations broke anywhere from $2 to $22. The loss in paper fortunes ran high into the dizzy millions, as high as a billion, according to the general estimates. It was the worst setback the market has suffered since the collapse of last fall.

The tariff was to blame—so the victims were assured. The bill has been a sore spot with the stock speculative fraternity ever since it was introduced, and particularly since its enactment became a foregone conclusion a week or so ago.

Hoover and "Street" Differ.

Some experts thought a turn would come with the end of the controversy and evidently this was the view of official Washington, for President Hoover made the point in his statement of last night that he was signing the measure for the good of business and because he considered that "urgent" action to settle the matter was necessary. But Wall street seems to have taken a contrary view and today's personally conducted stock selling storm was the answer.

The malcontents launched their attack at the very opening of the gong and carried it on relentlessly right through to the close of business.

No single group was spared and some of the highest priced shares of the list came in for particularly heavy slaughter. That big interests were standing from under, along with the professionals and the smaller fry, was testified by the size and frequency of big scale selling orders—blocks of 10,000 to 15,000 shares and more.

What Fifty Stocks Did.

On the basis of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S averages, fifty representative issues of the list lost an average of $11.81 a share on the day. On an average of twenty-five industrials—including many so-called "rich men's stocks"—the decline was even greater, amounting to $19.76 a share, while 25 railroads were off $3.86 at the close. The comparatively small showing of the carrier stocks was due to the small turnover in this department. The rails have not been in favor with the speculative element for months—not since the unfavorable earnings reports for the first months began to come in.

United States Steel, leader of the market, was taken for a ride with the rest and battered down $4.25 a share. It closed at 158¾, a new low for the year. New York Central closed at 159⅝, off 5⅜; General Electric at 67⅜, off 4¾; Consolidated Gas at 109½, off 8¼; American Can at 122½, off 10¼; Radio at 37½, off 3½; Johns-Manville at 89, off 6⅜; Public Service of New Jesey at 94¼, off 6½; Standard Oil of New Jersey at 64¾, off 5⅜ points, and Allied Chemical and Dye at 268, off 22 points—$22 a share.

Peoples Gas Off $20.

Case Threshing Machine, leader of the farm implements group, and Peoples Gas, big time Chicago utility favorite, each took a tumble for $20 a share. American Machine and Foundry dropped $22, Electric Auto-

PARENTS LEARN WHAT EDWIN COULDN'T TELL

For two days 13 year old Edwin Fischer had been unable to eat. His parents, remembering his previously hearty appetite, were alarmed, and Edwin was unable to explain the trouble. He has been deaf and dumb since birth.

Yesterday his mother took Edwin to the county hospital, where Dr. Herbert Nash took the boy in charge. Led to the X-ray laboratory, Edwin obediently submitted for a photograph.

But when the plate had been developed and Dr. Nash approached with a long slender tube, Edwin's assurance vanished. The boy clinched his teeth and vigorously shook his head, nor could all his mother's urging persuade him to open his mouth.

Then Dr. Nash wrote this note: "Now, Eddie, you have been at the circus and seen the sword swallower. We'll play circus and you be the sword swallower."

Edwin read the note and smiled eagerly. He threw back his head and the surgeon slipped the two foot tube down his throat. Into the tube and down the boy's esophagus the surgeon pushed a delicate but strong pair of forceps—part of an instrument called the esophageoscope.

Dr. Nash manipulated the instrument for a moment, then drew it out. At the end of the tube, firmly in the grip of the forceps, was a jackstone, one of those six pronged bits of metal which children use in play.

Edwin grinned and patted his belt in token that he was hungry. His mother took him home for a square meal, his first since he swallowed the jack after breakfast, Saturday.

Schall Leads in Minnesota Senate Race

St. Paul, Minn., June 16.—(AP)—Senator Thomas D. Schall piled up a lead for the Republican nomination for United States senator tonight, holding a steady advantage over his chief opponent, Gov. Theodore Christianson, even in the rural areas, the latter's chief reliance.

When 576 precincts out of 3,698 had reported Schall had 40,765 votes to 26,937 for Christianson, with John F. Selb, late entry in the race on a prohibition repeal platform, credited with 4,221 votes.

While the largest proportion of the ballots were from urban areas, the vote given Schall in rural sections proved to be a big surprise. The first precincts to report from the governor's home county, Lac Qui Parle, where he was born, edited a newspaper, and practiced law, gave Schall a plurality.

Close Race for Congress.

Two former congressmen, Knud Wefald and Ernest Lundeen, were running a close race for the Farmer-Labor senatorial nomination, with an especially light vote cast by members of that party.

For the Republican nomination for governor Ray P. Chase, state auditor, held a lead which started with the vote for the first precincts reporting. J. A. A. Burnquist, Minnesota's war governor, who came out of retirement to seek another term, was second on the basis of returns from 164 precincts. These gave Chase 9,961 votes to 6,434 for Burnquist, with four other candidates trailing far behind.

Beat Brewster in Maine.

Augusta, Me., June 17 [Tuesday.]—[Special.]—After a close battle that was in doubt for hours, Congressman Wallace H. White jr., of Lewiston, at 2 a. m. today appeared to have defeated former Gov. Ralph O. Brewster of Dexter for the Republican senatorial nomination in yesterday's primary. With slightly more than 540 precincts out of 632, White had a lead of 6,000 votes.

Gov. W. Tudor Gardiner, seeking renomination, defeated John Wilson, former mayor of Bangor. The vote for both senator and governor was surprisingly light.

Returns from 493 election precincts in the race for United States senator gave: White, 38,974; Brewster, 32,745. Dugald B. Dewar, a Portland broker, running as a wet, was far behind, polling only 5,000 votes in these precincts.

The three candidates were seeking the seat in the senate made vacant by the retirement of Senator Arthur R. Gould.

In 493 precincts the vote for governor was: Gardiner, 47,801; Wilson, 31,161.

HUNDREDS DRIVEN FROM HOMES BY AMMONIA FUMES

Detroit, Mich., June 16.—[Special.]—A creeping pall of ammonia gas drove hundreds of persons, half blinded and fighting for breath, into the streets near Trumbull and Grand River avenues late tonight when a large ammonia line in the ice plant of the Cities Service company on Trumbull avenue burst.

Fifteen persons, including one fireman, were treated for gas poisoning at Receiving hospital, while scores were given first aid at the scene of the blast. The gas which billowed from the building spread for many blocks. Residents were warned and found time to reach positions of safety.

The engineer in the plant fought his way through blinding fumes to shut down the three spreading compressors pumping the gas through the broken pipe.

Dawes Talks for Treaty on Capital Visit

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 16.—[Special.]—Charles G. Dawes, American ambassador to Great Britain, arriving in Washington today to be the guest of President Hoover, found himself the storm center of the controversy over ratification of the navy limitation treaty which he helped to negotiate.

Senator Henrik Shipstead [Farmer-Labor, Minn.], a member of the senate committee on foreign relations, revealed that he will ask the committee to call Gen. Dawes for examination on the negotiations if the administration persists in withholding the correspondence between London and Washington and other documents pertaining to the treaty.

The ambassador, who gave the treaty a big boost in talks with senators during the afternoon, did not appear to take the Shipstead move seriously, but said that of course he would respond if the committee should desire his attendance.

Coming to Chicago.

Gen. Dawes will leave for Chicago tomorrow on the Capitol Limited, arriving Wednesday morning. He reiterated that he had received no suggestion from Chicago that he should be made a dictator to clean up the reign of gang terror in that city and refused to discuss the situation because of lack of first hand knowledge. Other remarks he made indicated his belief that the leadership necessary to the reform of the evils from which Chicago is suffering is beginning to materialize. There is also reason to believe that Dawes will be heard from in no uncertain tone if he should be consulted on the task of housecleaning confronting Chicago.

The ambassador said he came home to confer with the managers of the Chicago exposition of 1933 on the location of the buildings and will return to London as soon as that business is completed. When asked by one reporter if he were going to resign his post, he said, with a chortle:

"Don't you think I'm making a good ambassador?"

Changes Collar Style.

Although refusing to wear knee pants at the British court the ambassador admitted that he had changed his style of collar since going to London. He ran out of these high turn down collars and tried the standing wing, finding that he had been making himself needlessly uncomfortable for twenty years.

On the treaty and on public questions generally, including the new tariff, he declined to talk for publication. Whereupon the reporters fell back on his pet hobby, the reform of the senate rules which he set out to achieve when he became Vice President but with no success.

"I'll tell you when the senate rules will be reformed," the general snorted, jerking the upside down pipe one way and a battered gray fedora the other. "It will be when a senator taking advantage of the present rules rises on the floor and announces that he will allow no bills but appropriation measures to be passed until a majority cloture rule is adopted. That will do the business and will end a condition under which the senate spends 98 per cent of its time passing two per cent of its legislation."

Brings British Exposition Expert.

The ambassador brought with him from London Sir Henry Cole, director of the department of expositions in the British foreign office, who may be retained by the Chicago exposition managers to direct the arrangement of exhibits.

Gen. Dawes, upon arrival in Washington, joined his brother, Rufus, at the Mayflower hotel, but when he called at the White House during the forenoon President Hoover insisted that he be his guest, and had his baggage sent for. The ambassador reached the White House soon after Senator James E. Watson [Rep., Ind.], majority leader of the senate, departed from a breakfast conference at which Mr. Hoover said that on the day the present session of congress adjourns he will call a special session of the senate to act on the navy treaty. The ambassador discussed the treaty and conditions abroad with the President for an hour and a half.

The afternoon Gen. Dawes spent at the senate renewing contacts with senators and putting in a word for the treaty whenever his opinion was asked. He told several senators that the treaty ends naval competition and that the points raised by the opposition are not worth quarreling over.

STEPS INTO JOB OF RUSSELL AS CHIEF OF POLICE

United Drive Opens on Lawlessness.

$55,825 IN REWARDS.

Rewards totaling $55,825 are offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the slayer of Alfred Lingle, Tribune reporter.

Acting Police Commissioner John Alcock last night became the leader of the fight demanded by press, politicians, business leaders, clergymen, and private citizens against gang outlawry, which culminated in the murder of Alfred Lingle, TRIBUNE reporter, a week ago.

Alcock assumed command of the police department after a series of events during the day—all of which were the outgrowth of investigations inspired by the Lingle murder — of which the following were outstanding:

1. Police Commissioner William F. Russell submitted his resignation to Mayor William Hale Thompson and relieved Chief of Detectives John Stege of his detective bureau command.

2. A statement was issued by the retiring commissioner saying he and Stege were stepping out of their offices so as not to impede a thorough investigation of the Lingle murder and of the police department itself. He added that in his 22 months as commissioner he had withstood heavy pressure and was leaving the department in better condition than he found it.

3. The city council committee on police met and heard Russell's and Stege's explanations of their withdrawals and voted to go to the bottom of charges of corrupt alliances of police and criminals.

4. The Association of Commerce special meeting of directors resulted in the creation of a special committee of sixteen to enlarge the work undertaken by the "Secret Six" to drive wrongdoers from the city. The business leaders made no public recommendations regarding a new police commissioner, nor any open request that Mayor Thompson resign.

5. The political action committee of the Chicago Church federation insisted upon an exposé of any partnership of crime and politics and a committee was appointed to make a definite inquiry as to why laws are not enforced.

Grand Jury Inquiry Ordered.

These activities were in conformity with the general thought expressed by Chief Justice Denis J. Normoyle of the Criminal court when he charged the June grand jury to begin a separate inquiry into "intolerable conditions." In charging the grand jury Justice Normoyle said:

"I direct your attention to the recent slaying of Alfred Lingle, a newspaper reporter. I urge that you inquire into this killing and the causes that led up to it.

"I am confident that State's Attorney Swanson, whom I know as an honest and faithful official, will give you all the investigators and assistants you may need to go into this matter thoroughly.

"When gunmen go beyond their guerrilla warfare and attack the ranks of private citizens it is time to curb them before they go one step further. I want to warn you that never at any time in my experience has a vigilance committee been necessary or such measures required. Gangsters at heart are inherent cowards and travel in packs like coyotes.

"They not only are a menace to this community but a disgrace to the whole United States. The city's reputation has been injured and it is up to us to act against these criminals and close every avenue of escape."

No Political Ties.

Alcock took office yesterday evening as the successor of Russell and a canvass of city leaders indicated he has a fair prospect of retaining the post during the remaining eight months of Mayor Thompson's administration.

The new head of the police department has been known as the disciplinarian of the department for nearly two decades and it is his third experience as commander of the force. Years ago a rebellious few termed Alcock "the slave driver," and yesterday there was considerable said in his favor as the right man at the right time to have charge of the cleanup.

Alcock has not been known to have any political ties and he came back to the commissioner's office yesterday due to the recommendation of no one, but by virtue of his civil service position of First Deputy Commissioner and by the special designation of Commissioner Russell who vacated the office. Advisers of the mayor said they knew of no one who might relieve Alcock of his command. The mayor said nothing.

City hall officials said in all probability Mayor Thompson would not submit the name of any one to the council at its meeting tomorrow as his nomination for the office of police commissioner, but would leave Alcock in charge to see how he takes hold and how the public reacts to his régime. It was predicted that Alcock's tenure of office would mean a "rough tough time" for the criminal element.

A Prediction Recalled.

A few weeks ago Deputy Alcock said to a TRIBUNE reporter:

"Unless something is done it won't be long until the crooks of Chicago are telling THE TRIBUNE what it can print and what it can't print."

Yesterday that statement was recalled and the new police boss said the Lingle murder bore out his prediction. He had no public statement on taking the new office, he told reporters, and he didn't know how long he would wield the big stick.

His first official act was the rescinding of Russell's last order which transferred six captains. Russell had assigned Stege to the Irving Park station [Jefferson Park] as captain, Stege's civil service rank, and he had moved Capt. Michael Grady to the loop to share responsibility with Capt. Daniel Gilbert, one being in charge days and the other nights. There were other transfers on Russells last order, but Alcock canceled them.

This action leaves Stege unassigned and under the necessity of reporting to Alcock this morning. By Russell's last order, Deputy Chief of Detectives John Egan became the new head of the detective bureau and Alcock left him there.

Russell to Be Captain.

Inasmuch as Maylor Thompson did not act on Russell's resignation, Corporation Counsel Ettelson advised the resigning commissioner that he was still nominally the responsible head of the department, although Russell had arranged for a captaincy [his civil service rank] for himself at Kensington after he returns from a rest at Mount Clemens, Mich. Alcock, therefore, became acting commissioner by virtue of his civil service rank of First Deputy Commissioner of Police.

Last minute efforts to dissuade Russell from submitting his resignation failed. The commissioner declared that his efficiency had been impaired through the torrents of criticism directed against him in the week following the murder of Lingle, who was his close friend, and he felt he would not be able to enforce discipline in the department when he was constantly under the necessity of defending himself.

The time was at hand for stern measures and the commissioner must be unhampered by personal feuds and self-serving purposes, Russell declared, and he took with him into comparative obscurity Chief Stege, who had been in personal charge of the police investigation of the murder of Lingle and the gang warfare which is believed to have caused his assassination.

Department Is Uneasy.

Russell's announcement that he had resigned caused uneasiness in the police force as to what is to happen. Many calls were received at the city hall with requests for information as to who would succeed and what the mayor was going to do about a possible reorganization of the force. There was no answer.

Russell gave public notice of his resignation in the morning. A copy of his letter to the mayor was given out and was as follows:

"I hereby tender my resignation as commissioner of police, to take effect immediately. I desire to take this opportunity of expressing to you my appreciation of your coöperation during my incumbency."

Russell's next move was the issuance of an order removing Stege from command of the detective bureau and assigning Stege to command of the Jefferson Park station as a captain. This he did at Stege's request, he said.

Appear Before Aldermen.

In the afternoon Russell and Stege were before the police committee, telling of their accomplishments during their tenure of office and declaring themselves ready to answer any questions. There were few questions because the aldermen had not contemplated the resignations of Russell and Stege when yesterday's meeting was called.

Corporation Counsel Ettelson prepared an order for Russell to sign as follows:

"John H. Alcock, First Deputy Commissioner of Police.

"Dear sir: This is to inform you that I have this day resigned as commissioner of police and am absenting myself from my office in the city hall.

"I am therefore, on account of my inability to act as commissioner, requesting you to act as acting commissioner of police, and while you are so acting you shall have and exercise the powers and duties of the office of the commissioner of police under and by virtue of the ordinances of the city of Chicago.

"Very truly yours,
"WILLIAM F. RUSSELL."

The mayor was not at his office and his secretaries and aids said he was out riding, thinking over what ought to be done.

Corporation Counsel Ettelson, County Treasurer George F. Harding, Bailiff Bernard W. Snow, Republican county chairman, and Eugene R. Pike, former city controller and former president of the Lincoln park board, the "big four" of the mayor's advisers, declared they had no one in mind to recommend to the mayor as Russell's successor.

The final act of Russell was the sending out of this message on the police teletype:

"To all members of the department: Having this day tendered my resignation as commissioner of police, I wish to take this opportunity of thanking all members of the department for their splendid coöperation during my term of service."

Aldermen Launch Inquiry to Improve Police Service

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

The city council committee on police and municipal institutions voted unanimously yesterday to conduct a thorough investigation of the police department with a view to recommending measures for increased efficiency. The first meeting will be held at 10 a. m. Thursday.

With Ald. Thomas F. Byrne in the chair, the committee met for a brief session in the office of Police Commissioner William F. Russell, who had just resigned. He gave up his chair to Ald. Byrne and retired to the side lines to smoke a big cigar, while the flash lights recorded this page of municipal history. The room soon became so crowded that the committee had to adjourn to the outer office, which is adorned by the pictures of all the former police department heads. Capt. John Stege, who resigned the control of the detective department when Russell stepped out, also was before the committee.

Called by J. B. Bowler.

Ald. James B. Bowler, who had requested these officers to appear, explained that since the last meeting of the committee a new situation had arisen. "I don't know what to do now," he said, looking around the room for suggestions.

STEGE—"We told you before that we had a definite idea about things. We said we would tell you outside the presence of the press. I would still like to tell you, so that, if the breaks come, you will know. I want to be as open as the door—in leaving. But if I tell you the particulars about this Lingle affair now we might not be able to accomplish it."

CHAIRMAN—"Is that your idea, Mr. Russell?"

RUSSELL—"My idea is the same. I am not so keen even about telling the committee about it. Any one could spoil our scheme."

CHAIRMAN—"Then I think you ought to go ahead without saying anything. Go ahead, and do as good a job as you can."

Explain Squad Orders.

STEGE—"We took six of the outstanding men of the department and put them in charge of squads to go where they please, and told them if they found any gangsters with guns to protect themselves. I had the assurance of big business men that any liability these men might incur would be underwritten. Lieut. Ed Birmingham was put at the head of one squad. Drury and Howe, that some of you gentlemen were inquiring about, were put on it. They were to roam the loop."

STEGE—"I am leaving every scrap of information on this Lingle case to Egan. If they get any kind of a break that case will be cleaned up soon by those who come after me. I promised Russell if he went I would go too."

BOWLER—"It is foolish for you to go. I think you should stay on the job."

STEGE—"I have only six or seven months left in the department, and I will do nothing else but work on this case."

RUSSELL—"That goes for me, too."

CHAIRMAN—"Any questions of these gentlemen?"

STEGE—"I might say that when I came into the department there was complaint that crime news was being suppressed. We went out to the University of Chicago and asked for an investigation. A citizens' committee was appointed, headed by Elmer Stevens, and Bruce Smith of New York was picked to investigate the department. He has been at it six months and we now have a centralized system, so that every crime is reported and recorded and broadcast from the 11th street station. Today we are starting the radio broadcasting.

"In the testimony of police in criminal cases we have established a school under a law teacher and where judges lecture three times a week. We have arrested 5,000 with criminal records, 600 with weapons. We now have a branch bureau of identification. I did the best I could. There has not been a conviction of one gangster for killing another in the United States since prohibition.

"We convicted one fellow, Jimmy Maloney, and gave him 14 years, but the Supreme court turned him loose. In the Saltis-Oberta case we had plenty of evidence, eyewitnesses to murder, and the jury turned Saltis loose. Prohibition is responsible for everything we are suffering today."

Russell's Resignation.

ALD. MAYPOLE—"The papers say that the chief has resigned. Are you still head of the department, Russell?"

RUSSELL—"I tendered my resignation and asked that it be accepted immediately, but the corporation counsel advised me that I would remain as chief until my successor was appointed."

STEGE—"I have kept open house for newspaper men. Some have been of great assistance in these gang killing investigations. Others have been a detriment."

BOWLER—"We have an ordinance before us, and I move that we investigate the police department."

AN ALDERMAN—"The ordinance is a joke."

BOWLER—"Nevertheless, I think we ought to go ahead. Some of us have ideas as to organization. I think a lot of man power is being wasted. I move that we have a thorough investigation and make a report as to the best way of improving the department."

Up to Council, He Says.

ALD. ALBERT [attorney for committee]—"I do not object to going into the reorganization of the department. That resolution possibly was not broad enough. It was before the untimely death of Reporter Lingle. Next Wednesday I shall introduce another resolution that will be general. It is said that outside agencies do not get facts and are not helpful. This obligation rests with the city council. A condition is prevalent in the department and should be dealt with by the council and mayor.

CHAIRMAN—"Any questions to ask the chief?"

ALD TOMAN—"I have seen many chiefs and I never understood why the press was always one step ahead of the police. I don't believe it does the city any good. That crime stuff is not good reading for our youngsters. I was in the public library 22 years and we wouldn't allow that stuff on the shelves. I think the press is responsible for some of this themselves. I think the police department should be run as it is in other cities. In New York they have a lot of murders and no one knows anything about it."

ALBERT—"I suggest a meeting Thursday morning at 10 o'clock."

CHAIRMAN—"It is so ordered."

RUSSELL QUITS "TO LET OTHERS TACKLE CRIME"

Blames Prohibition for Troubles of Job.

William F. Russell resigned yesterday as commissioner of police of Chicago after 22 months in that office. He holds the office of commissioner until his successor is appointed and qualified, after which he becomes a captain of police, his civil service rank, and he will be assigned to the Kensington station.

Russell was appointed a patrolman on April 5, 1905, and sergeant in October, 1911. In December, 1915, he was promoted to a lieutenancy and the next year won a civil service captaincy. Then he was made a deputy commissioner by appointment and on Aug. 1, 1928, he was made acting head of the department and the appointment was confirmed by the city council on Sept. 12, 1928.

Explains His Resignation.

Russell's resignation followed by one week the murder of Alfred J. Lingle, TRIBUNE reporter, who was a close friend of the commissioner. A statement issued by Russell when he resigned follows:

"I'm resigning because I can't function here any longer, and because I do not want to hamper any investigation. I thought I did a good job and I am willing to let some one else try it. Deputy Stege is going to the Irving Park station so that he will not hamper any investigation either. I have been working day and night since I took this job, and have been working until 4 and 5 in the morning.

"I will not step out of the department, but go back to my civil service rank as captain, and I'll stay in the department as long as they want me. They will find I'm the same Bill Russell I always was. I'm only getting myself and Stege out of the picture.

Tells Troubles of Job.

"There has not been a pleasant minute in my life in the last two years. I saved money out of salaries to buy a hundred police cars and to establish the radio which will be inaugurated today.

"State's Attorney Swanson gave us the best he could and had. He tried damned hard and is trying, but he's hampered, too. They won't give him money, either, to hire the best attorneys. It all resolves down to a question of finances. Some one had to be the red meat. I didn't want to come here in the first place, and I am glad to get out. I sincerely hope my successor will have a happier time than I had.

"Conditions in Chicago are better than in any big city in the country, and except for a few rackets I defy a city to show a cleaner record than Chicago. With unemployment prevalent we have less robberies, burglaries, and similar crimes. Stege here has had to sleep standing up.

"I've stood nine hundred million tons of pressure, and stood it manfully. I am not alibiing. I'll put my record against that of other chiefs of police. You can ask Yarrow, Miner, Gilday, Farwell, or any of those reformers to comment on the situation.

Says Gambling Is Throttled.

"They say gambling, vice and saloons are running open, but you can't show me an open gambling house in Chicago. I engaged the best men in the profession—professors at the University of Chicago, for instance. I organized a traffic safety and educational commission which effected a saving of more than 100 lives in a year. I fought for more police, more cars and did everything to make Chicago a good city. But I have met insurmountable obstacles, and I mean prohibition.

"The reason I'm resigning is to give them all a free hand, and let them stick their noses in it and find out what they can. All this has made it impossible for me to function."

FIRST OF 3 RADIO STATIONS FOR POLICE SIGNALS IS OPENED

Police officials and Col. Robert Isham Randolph, president of the Association of Commerce, yesterday participated in the demonstration opening of the city's first police owned radio station. The plant is at the Warren avenue station. The city plans three stations to broadcast crime flashes and urgent instructions to squad cars. The south side station will be located at the Wabash police district and the one on the north side at the Townhall station.

The officials rode in four squad cars that had been equipped by Lieut. Kenneth Cox. As the cars traveled the streets Quin Ryan, W-G-N announcer, who was stationed at the microphone at police headquarters at 11th and State streets, gave bulletins of police news.

Lieut. Cox said that approximately $100,000 had been spent for equipment and that $98,184 is needed to complete the installation and for maintenance for 1930. He said the annual cost will be $166,000. All "flivver" and squad cars are to be equipped with receiving sets.

NEW ANTI-CRIME GROUP REPLACES THE 'SECRET SIX'

Business Men Lay Plans to Wipe Out Gangs.

Forty-eight business leaders met in secret session yesterday at the Union League club to consider crime conditions. They were called together by Col. Robert Isham Randolph, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, who announced that, instead of the usual speeches and passing of resolutions, concrete moves to wipe out the gangs would be considered.

The main purpose achieved at the meeting, according to a later announcement, was to abolish the so-called "Secret Six," a committee appointed some weeks ago to investigate crimes and assist the authorities with evidence against criminals.

Instead, a committee of 16 men was appointed to carry on and enlarge upon the work of the "Secret Six." Like its predecessor, the new committee will have a secret membership and work under cover.

The formal statement issued by Col. Randolph, who avoided reporters after the meeting, was as follows:

"A definite plan has been adopted providing for the immediate enlargement of the secret investigating activities being carried on by the committee for the prevention and punishment of crime. The committee has been enlarged to increase its effectiveness, and it now includes active representatives of all the powerful business organizations of Chicago."

One business man at the meeting, who refused to allow his name to be used, said:

"The meeting was typical of what happens when 48 men, no matter how prominent, get together and try to settle something. Some worthwhile ideas were expressed, but lost in a cloud of words tossed out indiscriminately by others present. It was a piteous spectacle."

Attacks Failure to Vote.

Mrs. Martha Trimble, chairman of the National Council of Federated Church Women, which is meeting this week at the Shoreland hotel, declared yesterday that gangland owes its power to the citizens who, by failing to vote, allow bad officials to gain office.

"Non-church members vote 100 per cent, and sometimes more than 100 per cent," said Mrs. Trimble. "On the other hand church people vote only 12 per cent at ordinary municipal elections. Christian citizenship committees are being organized in the large cities of the country to urge Christian citizens to help put down the crime wave."

Dean Mathews addressed the council last night.

EX-SECRETARY FALL APPLIES FOR PENSION FOR SERVICE IN WAR

A. B. FALL.

Washington, D. C., June 16.—(AP)—Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior, has applied to the government for a pension for military service during the Spanish-American war. The application of Fall, who was a captain during the Spanish American war, is on file at the bureau of pensions. Officials said his service apparently entitled him to a pension. Fall, is at present at liberty on bond on his conviction of receiving a bribe of $100,000 from Edward L. Doheny in connection with naval oil leases. He has been reported in financial difficulties and a ranch in New Mexico was sold to satisfy creditors.

Under the Spanish veterans' pension bill, recently enacted over President Hoover's veto, Fall, who is 69, would receive $40 a month.

CLAIRE WINDSOR IN YACHT WRECK WITH P. M. PLANT

Both Hurled Into Sea; One Sailor Drowns.

New York, June 16.—[Special.]—Claire Windsor, the motion picture actress, and Philip M. Plant, millionaire sportsman and former husband of Constance Bennett, narrowly escaped drowning early today when they were flung into Long Island sound, off Greenwich, Conn., as Plant's cruiser yacht sank after a collison with the yacht of Otis Chatfield Taylor of New York City.

One sailor, a member of the crew of Loleta, Plant's thirty-six foot express cruiser, was drowned.

Miss Windsor and Mr. Plant were rescued by the crew of the Taylor yacht, directed in the rescue work by Taylor, who has been prominently connected with the financing of several theatrical productions in recent seasons. Taylor's boat is the Chang Wang III.

Struck Amidship.

According to the report of the Greenwich police, the Loleta was headed in a northeasterly direction and the Chang Wang was moving in a southwest direction. Plant was at the wheel of his yacht and Taylor's captain, Jack Hibeley of New York, was at the wheel of the Chang Wang III.

The Plant yacht, it was reported, swung suddenly to the starboard and the Chang Wang III. struck it amidship. The Plant yacht kept on its course for a short distance, but the impact threw Miss Windsor and Plant from the deck into the water. The captain of the Plant craft, E. K. Hatfied of New London, was also thrown into the water.

Passengers Thrown Into Wate

Three of the Loleta's passengers were standing on the deck fell into the water. They were Earl Larrimore and Therese Lewis, both of New York, and J. H. Vincent of Greenwich. The Loletta immediately stopped her engines and then reversed them. Its searchlight played over the water and the crew pulled the members of its party back to the deck.

Miss Windsor was picked up, then Plant and the captain.

The Chang Wang III. cruised for an hour and a half, playing its searchlight back and fourth, but nothing was seen of the sailor.

The Loleta sank within ten minutes after the collision. The Chang Wang III. sailed into Indian harbor and tied up at the Indian Harbor Yacht club.

MEXICO LEADERS PRAY FOR MORROW VICTORY IN JERSEY PRIMARY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MEXICO CITY, June 16.—No political event in the United States, not even a presidential election, has caused so much interest among Mexican officials of all classes as Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow's fight in the Republican primaries for the senatorship of the state of New Jersey. President Ortiz Rubio, former President Portes Gil and former President Plutarco Elias Calles have all expressed hope for Ambassador Morrow's success.

At a political meeting last night a discussion of the New Jersey struggle, which accidentally arose, brought rousing cheers for Ambassador Morrow. A Mexican leader close to Señor Calles said today:

"Our only interest in the United States today is the fight Ambassador Morrow is making. To all Mexico Mr. Morrow was the champion of an established government against rule by military and a leader of the military party."

FRENCH EXECUTE 13 INDO-CHINESE MUTINEERS TODAY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, June 16.—Military and colonial authorities fear new disorders in Indo-China on the occasion of the execution of 13 Nationalist leaders found guilty of provoking the bloody Yenbay mutiny. Each of the 13 doomed men will be decapitated at dawn at Yenbay tomorrow. Dispatches from Indo-China report that the town and the whole province is seething with unrest and additional troops are being rushed into the district. The town was patrolled tonight by native soldiers with fixed bayonets, who were working barefoot in order to move quietly and sneak up on agitators.

Thirty-nine were originally sentenced to death, but the sentences of the 26 others, who took a lesser part in the uprising, were commuted to life imprisonment.

Mrs. Dechow's Divorce Papers Taken from Home

A thief with a pass key entered the home of Mrs. Lottie Brenner Dechow, 5928 Sheridan road, last night while she and her sister, Mrs. Christiana Gross, were motoring, broke into a trunk in her bedroom, and departed with papers relating to her divorce case against her estranged husband, Henry Dechow, the bogus "Count Enrique von Buelow." Such at least was her story to Summerdale police, who have recently been called upon to investigate a $50,000 robbery in her home and an alleged attempt to assassinate her. The police launched a hunt for Dechow.

MORROW CHIEFS SURE OF VICTORY IN JERSEY VOTE

Opposition Claims Just as Confident.

Newark, N. J., June 16.—[Special.]—President Hoover's neutral stand in the New Jersey primary contest was accepted today as entirely satisfactory to Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow and the Republican organization in the state. Whatever political advantage accrues from the President's stand is credited by the political chiefs to the ambassador.

The Morrow leaders ended the campaign tonight with confident predictions that Mr. Morrow will be nominated tomorrow by a plurality of at least 100,000. Many put the figure much higher. They see it as a ground swell. Managers for Joseph S. Frelinghuysen and Franklin W. Fort, rivals in the primary, discount the Morrow claims as extravagant, and each predicts victory.

Expect Heavy Vote.

There is every evidence that the state is aroused thoroughly over this contest and that the big commuter vote which usually remains silent in a party primary will be heard plainly at the polls tomorrow. That is regarded as almost entirely a vote for the ambassador, and if it does turn out may bolster the claims of the managers for a big plurality.

All that the Morrow managers asked from the White House was a neutral stand. Mr. Fort's dry adherents have been advertising through the state that he was the President's candidate and running with the approval of the President. They have maintained that the President did not indorse the ambassador's extreme wet stand. By declaring his neutrality, therefore, the President indicates that he does not take sides in the wet and dry controversy, which is the feature of the campaign.

The statement from the White House clarifying the situation as far as President Hoover is concerned was issued after supporters of Mr. Fort and Mr. Frelinghuysen protested a declaration by United States Senator Baird, in a speech at Pitman, N. J., on Saturday, to the effect that the executive is "intensely interested in seeing New Jersey send Dwight W. Morrow to the senate."

Today saw a last minute spurt on the part of each of the three leading candidates. Mr. Morrow, whose declaration for repeal of the eighteenth amendment and return of liquor control to the states made prohibition a leading issue, spoke at Asbury Park and concluded his campaign with an address tonight in New Brunswick.

Candidates End Campaigns.

Representative Fort, whose dry candidacy has the backing of the Anti-Saloon league, wound up with a radio appeal tonight. Former Senator Frelinghuysen, who became a wet after being an ardent supporter of the eighteenth amendment, spoke in and around Newark, the center of his political strength.

CENSUS SHOWS 4.32% OF CITY'S POPULATION IDLE

Tabulate Figures on Unemployment.

Census figures made available yesterday showed that 4.32 per cent of Chicago's population was unemployed when census work started in April. A tabulation of unemployment figures by census districts showed that of Chicago's 3,373,753 residents 147,152 were jobless then. The figures include those persons who are usually employed in gainful occupations or are able to work and are looking for jobs.

Observers pointed out that the census data gives a far brighter picture of the unemployment situation than was predicted earlier. Ralph L. Goodman, vice chairman of the census supervisory committee, expressed the belief that a large number of those who were without work at the time the census enumerators visited their homes are now employed.

Further Study Is Urged.

In order to obtain more definite and detailed information on Chicago's unemployed, the census supervisors propose that a survey be made with the aid of the University of Chicago to check and amplify the census figures which will not be analyzed and made available by the Washington census bureau for another year.

Joseph E. Vesely, chairman of the census committee, yesterday refused to give out the unemployment figures by wards, stating that he feared criticism from ward politicians who might want this information withheld.

Give District Figures.

Following, however, are the unemployment figures by census districts: Sixth district (wards 20 to 30, excluding 28), 29,714; 29th district (wards 5 to 10), 15,311; seventh district (wards 12 to 19), 23,223; fifth district (wards 42 to 50), 27,527; third district (wards 41 and 46), 7,948; fourth district (wards 31 to 39 and ward 28), 30,053; eighth district [wards 1, 2, 3, 4, and 11], 13,416.

Following are unemployment figures for eleven north side wards:

Ward.	Unemployed.	Per-cent-age.	Ward.	Unemployed.	Per-cent-age.
40	3,449	3.2	46	3,130	5.4
41	4,490	3.5	47	2,344	3.8
42	4,422	8.9	48	2,891	4.4
43	3,866	6.8	49	2,430	2.4
44	2,597	4.4	50	3,244	3.3
45	2,606	4.9

The ward showing the highest percentage of unemployment of those wards so far made public is the Forty-second which includes the Gold Coast district. It was disclosed, however, that the district along the lake shore had practically no employment while the sections west of the drive showed as high as 15 per cent unemployment in certain localities.

RALPH CAPONE GETS 3 YEARS FOR TAX FRAUD

Florida Governor Tells of War on Al.

CRIMINAL COURT.

Patrick Stack, James Caffery, Edward Houlihan, and Emmett McCastland, larceny, sentenced to 1 year each in the county jail by Judge D. J. Normoyle.

Thomas Hayes and Eugene Quinn, burglary, sentenced to 1 year each in Pontiac reformatory by Judge John J. Sullivan.

Ralph J. Capone, brother of Alphonse, spent a gloomy day yesterday in custody of deputy marshals, contemplating the prospect of a three year term at Leavenworth prison. The sentence on his conviction of defrauding the government out of income taxes was imposed by Federal Judge Wilkerson.

The defendant appeared stunned by the sentence, but he refused to discuss it. When he was taken to the marshal's quarters, a prisoner, while his $35,000 bond was being investigated, he remarked, "I don't understand this at all."

New Bond Is Approved.

Late yesterday Capone was released when Federal Judge Woodward approved the $35,000 bond for reinstatement pending an appeal. About $240,000 in real estate had been scheduled and $10,000 additional cash was put up by Philip d'Andrea, bondsman.

Judge Wilkerson granted defense counsel sixty days in which to file a bill of exceptions and assignment of errors for an appeal. Before pronouncing sentence he had denied motions for a new trial and for arrest of judgment.

Fine Set at $10,000.

In addition to the prison sentence, Capone was fined $10,000 by Judge Wilkerson. He was given three years and fined $10,000 on each of two counts in one indictment charging "attempts to cheat, swindle and defraud" the government, through false statements and concealment of assets in connection with an offer in compromise. On another indictment, charging willful failure to file income tax returns and concealment of material facts in the compromise offer, he was given one year in the Cook county jail and fined $10,000 for each count.

All the sentences and fines are to run concurrently, but the government prosecutors, Cassius Poust, Dwight H. Green, and Jacob Grossman, will ask today that the two year jail term be made to run concurrently with the last two years at Leavenworth. Under federal regulations a prisoner is eligible for parole when he has served one-third of his term, and Capone may get out of Leavenworth at the end of one year. But if the jail sentence runs with the second two years, he would still have eight months of it to serve.

Capone owed the government some $300,000 in taxes and penalties, according to the prosecutors, but he could have settled for $4,065 which was assessed against him in 1927. Instead, he offered $1,000 in compromise, pleading insolvency. Government testimony showed that he deposited $1,871,000 in a Cicero bank from 1924 to 1929.

The conviction of Capone was the first in United States Attorney Johnson's drive on alleged tax evading hoodlums and politicians, in which more than a dozen have been indicted. County Assessor Gene G. Oliver is next on the income tax trial docket and his case is set for tomorrow but is expected to be continued until Monday.

Ralph Capone was recently indicted by the government on charges of conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws through operation of his Cicero cabarets and running whisky from Canada by airplanes.

Gov. Carlton Tells of Fight.

Gov. Doyle E. Carlton of Florida, a leader in the fight against Alphonse Capone in that state, was a visitor in Chicago yesterday. He predicted that the effort to steal official records to be used in a perjury trial against Al, reported yesterday, would do the defendant no good.

"That only means that Florida's fight against Capone and his gang will be more relentless than ever," said the governor. He added that he believed the perjury trial, growing out of an action brought by Capone against Miami officials for harassing him, would result in driving the gangster from the state.

"Florida is a health resort, and a state of permanent homes for law abiding citizens, but we mean to make it unhealthful for Capone and his like. In the end he will find Florida no more desirable than it finds him."

Gov. Carlton was guest of honor at a luncheon of the Chicago Bar association, where many of his hosts were former classmates at the University of Chicago. Tonight he will address the graduating class of the Chicago Law school, where he will receive the honorary degree of doctor of laws.

9 LINERS ARE RACING TO U. S. WITH CARGOES TO AVOID NEW TARIFF

New York, June 16.—[Special.]—While liners and freighters were racing toward this and other ports to enter cargoes with the customs before the unknown, but anticipated zero hour when the President will sign the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill, merchants and importers made record withdrawals from bonded warehouses here. The customs coffers at the port of New York were enriched by $17,000,000.

Of the nine liners due here tomorrow it was expected that the majority would arrive in time to enter their cargoes before the customs house closes in the afternoon.

Interest in shipping circles centered around the White Star liner Olympic. That liner bears a cargo in excess of $1,000,000 of French lace, hundreds of original gowns of French creators, and other clothing of foreign design.

RETALIATE! CRIES EUROPE AGAINST NEW U. S. TARIFF

Howl of Protest Rises in the Press.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, June 16.—Speedy action by all countries in Europe to unite in a customs union against the United States along the lines laid down by Aristide Briand has been necessitated by the passing of the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill is the opinion of Armand Megles, head of the national bureau of foreign trade, a semi-official body which represents the most powerful commercial interests in France.

Press comment on the new American tariff, which was moderate at first, is growing more rabid. The dominant theme in all editorials is that it will speed up the formation of a "United States of Europe." M. Briand's plan was at first received coolly by the rest of Europe, but, judging from dispatches from the various capitals of Europe, there is a pronounced trend now in favor of it.

Calls It "Unfriendly Procedure."

"I consider that the tariff bill gravely strikes at all of our major exports," M. Megles declares. "The result will be that public opinion in France, indignant at such unfriendly procedure, will impose measures of reprisal. America's force lies in taking advantage of the economic division of Europe. If we, according to the wish of M. Briand, realize a European economic union, America will quickly have to lower her flag.

"Feeling among French merchants is running very high. The government and parliament will certainly be forced to revise the French tariffs in reprisal. In the long run the prohibitive tariffs of the United States will react against themselves. Belgium, Germany, and Holland are affected as much as ourselves. Under the pressure of their own interests these nations will end by uniting for concerted action."

Italy Voices Apprehension.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, June 16.—Grave apprehension for the future of Italian trade as a direct consequence of the approval of the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill by the United States congress was voiced tonight by the Giornale d'Italia, semi-official daily newspaper and mouthpiece of Italian commercial and industrial circles.

Declaring that .11 per cent of all Italian exports go to the United States, the editorial says the Hawley-Smoot tariff is a serious menace to the Italian agricultural and industrial exporting trade.

The pessimistic outlook on the consequences of the new tariff bill is grounded upon the outstanding figures of last year's Italian exporting trade to America, which Sig. Gayda, editor of the Giornale d'Italia, says is already poor.

Figures Are Quoted.

From a total of 134,932 quintals of olive oil exported last year from Italy 88,232 quintals were sold to the United States, the paper says. Of 10,331,763 felt hats Italy exported last year 559,926 went to America, and of 6,017,239 straw hats exported, 3,522,583 were bought by citizens of the United States. Similar figures are quoted in connection with Italian marble and silk glove exports.

Since 1927, the paper says, Italy has shown a deficit in trade with the United States. In that year it was $131,000; in 1928 it was $130,528, and in 1929 it was $96,730.

Another factor weighing on the weakened condition of the Italian exporting trade, says the paper, is the payment of war debts to America, which the Giornale d'Italia tonight announced will be paid to the last cent.

Discouraging the idea of retaliation Sig. Gayda advocates mere defensive measures. He says that Italy might find complete satisfaction with articles from other countries, and recommends that Italian attention be given to the South American and Australian markets.

Canadian Premier Makes U. S. Tariff "War" Election Issue

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BRANTFORD, Ont., June 16.—Defending his government's course in increasing tariff duties against the United States in view of American tariff increases against Canada and again holding out a trade olive branch to the American republic, Premier Mackenzie King threw the Canadian 1930 election campaign into high gear here tonight when he delivered the Liberal party keynote speech before an audience of several thousand in the Brantford armories. Radio carried his plea all over the dominion.

Crowds jammed the Brantford station to greet the prime minister, Minister of National Revenue William Euler, and a coterie of Ottawa dignitaries. He chose Industrial Ontario in which to make the first speech because it is regarded as the hardest fighting ground and a locality where the election may be won or lost to the Liberal government, which has held office since 1921.

Presents Three Issues.

The prime minister presented three issues, which he held should govern the Canadian electors in the campaign just set under way; first, the government's record; second, the 1930 budget carrying tariff increases against America and tariff concessions to British empire units, and third, the choice, as between liberals and conservatives, of which party he is to represent Canada at the British empire constitutional and trade conferences in London in September.

Holding the government's administrative record to be unequaled, both in the matter of domestic and foreign trade expansion and national financial betterment, Premier Mackenzie King claimed for his Liberal party the right to represent Canada at the London conferences because the Liberal party had secured for Canada equal status among all the units comprising the empire.

"At every step toward national statuture," he said, "the Liberal administration encountered the opposition of the Conservative party."

Talks About Tariff.

In connection with the Canadian-American tariff issues, the premier said:

"Our position concerning the United States is perfectly clear and I might add equally strong, come what may. In nothing have we been provocative. We have recognized that the United States is free to legislate as it pleases concerning its own tariff. As a good neighbor and in some respects the United States' best customer, we have made known where certain tariff changes may adversely affect our interests. We have expressed hope that our relations being neighborly, neighborly considerations would govern in respect to the tariff as in all else.

"We have made it clear that only in an atmosphere of confidence and good will is it going to be possible to adjust to the greatest mutual advantage many of the problems, which, in their nature, are bound to be international. If, in the face of all this, the tariff of the United States should be so altered as adversely to affect to any appreciable degree any interests of this country the United States will be the first to recognize our Canadian interests.

"If the United States or any other country does not want to trade with Canada except on unequal terms, then surely we can look to the rest of the world and particularly the rest of the British empire."

BURGLAR LOOTS OFFICE OF CAPONE CASE PROSECUTOR

Miami, Fla., June 16.—[Special.]—An attempt to steal the prosecution's evidence in the perjury charge against Al Capone was made some time Sunday, it was discovered today. The desk, files and safe of Richard H. Hunt, special prosecutor of the county solicitor's office, were ransacked and all matter pertaining to the Capone case stolen.

The affidavits in the case had been left on the desk and were missing, but $150 in the drawer was not taken.

Mr. Hunt said that the robber had obtained only carbon copies.

Father and His Two Sons Drown in Ohio River

Cincinnati, O., June 16.—(AP)—Three persons, a father and his two sons, were drowned today in the Ohio river at Fernbank dam, near here. The victims were John H. Mayer and his sons, Jack, 13, and William, 11. The trio had been picking blackberries and then went swimming. It was believed the father died trying to save the boys.

HOOVER'S TARIFF MESSAGE UNDER DEMOCRATS' FIRE

Stock Market Disproves Him, They Say.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 16.—[Special.]—President Hoover was under fire today from the Democrats on his statement of yesterday announcing his intention to sign the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill. Senator Pat Harrison (Dem., Miss.) in a speech in the senate denounced the President. Senator J. T. Robinson (Dem., Ark.), minority leader, and Jouett Shouse, chairman of the Democratic national executive committee, issued statements criticizing the reasons advanced by the President for signing the bill.

Curtis Signs Bill.

Vice President Curtis signed the bill when the senate convened today, and it was sent at once to the White House. In accordance with the customary formality it was referred to the treasury department. As soon as the bill comes back from the treasury, probably tomorrow, the President will sign it. The new duties will become effective at midnight following the day on which it is signed.

"They said that stocks would be boosted sky highward," said Senator Harrison. "Instead they have gone down. That's the situation we have today and the reason business people have no confidence in the executive branch of the government."

Disagrees on Benefits.

"Experience has not established the correctness of President Hoover's conclusion that the flexible provision 'gives great hope of taking the tariff away from politics, lobbying, and log rolling,'" said Senator Robinson. "The fact remains that the new tariff legislation, while not assuring relief for agriculture, greatly increases living costs to domestic consumers and invites hostile measures by foreign governments against our commerce."

"More and more," said Mr. Shouse, "the political year of 1932 takes on the same appearance as that of 1910 when President Taft, after deploring the enormity of the Payne-Aldrich tariff, signed it, and by that act signed his retirement from the White House two years later. The only difference in the course of these two Republican Presidents is that, while Taft stressed the faults of the measure, Hoover palliates them. But the ostensible reason given by both for approving a bad tariff bill is the same."

STRAWN GROUP ASKS 'MODERATE' TAX INCREASES

Presents Final Plea for 31 Relief Bills.

BY PERCY WOOD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., June 16.—[Special.] The final plea of the Strawn citi- committee for the enactment of bills for the financial relief of ago and Cook county was that increases in the tax bills of prop- owners in this emergency would "moderate."

This was the high spot in a figure- printed statement distributed to bers of the general assembly late on the eve of the reconvening the special session which, since 13, has had before it the finan- troubles of Chicago and the pro- for the amendment of the rev- article of the constitution.

Avalanche of Debt.

With only two weeks left before deadline of June 30, this is con- the last formal utterance of group headed by Attorney Silas which has attempted to dig local governments from beneath avalanche of debt. The communi- it was remarked, stressed the that the increase in expense of ernment was due more to the as- bodies than tax spending

The committee told the legislature "the true comparative increase to the pending emergency pro- ranges from less than 5 per for 1929, to about 21 per cent for the year of the highest increase, the face of the proposed new rates, about 19 per cent (maximum) operation of the budget bills." many columns of figures are in- in the six large tabulations rizing the statement. Newspaper found it impossible to condense of these; for example, one show- tax bills on an imaginary piece of erty assessed at $1,000 in 1927, ich was taken as a standard.

Will Add Expense of $2.32.

effect, what is shown is as fol-

This sample, a tract in the south district, which includes the towns South Chicago, Hyde Park and , was taxed in 1927 at $48.50. In , the tax was $44.18, representa- of the general reduction all over city. Estimated on the present the 1929 tax would be $50.79, to ch the proposed relief would add xpense of $2.32, bringing the total the 1929 bill to $53.11.

r 1930 the present law would call a tax on this imaginary property $60.11, but the emergency legis- would take an additional $7.03 this, and the bill would become 4. The 1931 increase on the $50.11 ent law estimate would be $9.26, a total of $59.37.

The peak increase called for by the would be reached in 1932, when, hout legislation, the taxpayer ld pay $50.11, plus an increase of 8, bringing the bill to $60.14, as pared with the 1927 amount of 8.

Jump from $48.60 to $59.37.

From the peak the increases lower the remaining two years, includ- in the proposed program, total- $59.28 for 1933 and $59.54 for 4. An imaginary $1,000 property the town of West Chicago, which und, according to the rate opera- in the West Park district, would. table showed, start at $48.60 in , and jump, over successive years, $59.37 at the peak, in 1932, shad- downward to $58.77 in the final gram year.

like property in the town of North Chicago or in Lakeview, controlled by the Lincoln Park district rate, would start, in 1927, from a bill of $50 for Lakeview and $49.90 for North Chicago, and in 1932 would reach respectively figures of $60.92 and $61.

In 1934 they would stand at $60.32 and $60.40 on the basis of the pending legislation.

Can't Estimate Bills.

The representatives of the committee said it was impossible to estimate the bills of the towns of Rogers Park, Jefferson and Calumet on an imaginary property.

A condensed summary of the tax rates up to and including 1934 split the towns into four groups. In the following table, group A includes the South Park district and the towns of South Chicago, Hyde Park and Lake; group B, the West Park district and the town of West Chicago, group C, the Lincoln Park district and the towns of North Chicago and Lakeview, and group D, the towns of Rogers Park, Jefferson and Calumet.

Rate for Prospective Year.

The tax rates for prospective years, as they would be levied, if the relief program is adopted, are as follows:

LISTED YEAR—	A	B	C	D
1927	$4.85	$4.86	$5.00	$4.38
			4.99
1928	5.15	5.18	5.34	4.60
			5.31
1929	6.19	6.06	6.34	5.56
1930	6.66	6.58	6.75	5.95
1931	6.92	6.83	7.01	6.21
			7.02
1932	7.01	6.92	7.10	6.30
			7.11
1933	6.92	6.82	7.00	6.20
			7.01
1934	6.94	6.85	7.03	6.23
			7.04

The top figure in group C is the tax rate for the town of Lakeview; the one beneath it, the rate for the town of North Chicago.

The final paragraph of the statement issued by the committee reads as follows:

"It must be remembered that the pending bills are designed to produce the minimum requirements of government, and to meet the existing emergency in a way that will prevent its recurrence. They are also designed through model budget and fiscal control features to give the public relief from the constantly recurring deficits which have made for ever increasing tax bills in the past."

WOMAN KILLED IN COLLISION OF AUTO AND BUS

Mrs. Geraldine Gaps, 28 years old, of Old Hickory, Tenn., was killed, and her husband, Louis Gaps, was injured seriously yesterday when their automobile collided with a bus at Jackson boulevard and Ogden avenue. Six passengers in the bus escaped injury. Edward Maskow, the bus driver, was held.

Two other deaths yesterday raised the 1930 Cook county motor toll to 405. The victims:

William Thomas, 55 years old, 1032 West Congress street, fatally injured when he was struck by a motor truck driven by John Goshe, 3708 Wabansia avenue, in front of 923 West Van Buren street. Goshe was not held.

George Stevens, 19 years old, 3241 North Damen avenue. Died at the Illinois Masonic hospital from injuries incurred on June 9 when his motorcycle collided with an auto in front of 3068 North Lincoln avenue.

Henry Vanderhoe, 1505 North Lorel avenue, and William Kilber, 8618 Berenice avenue, were held by the police after the car in which they were riding struck and probably fatally injured Mrs. Helen Trempler, 25 years old, of 4410 Armitage avenue, as she was pushing a baby carriage across Armitage avenue at Kostner avenue. Her baby was not hurt.

George Frankenberg, 66 years old, of 209 South Lombard avenue, Oak Park, died in a hospital at La Porte, Ind., yesterday of injuries incurred on Sunday when his car skidded on a wet pavement at Hamlet, Ind.

DOWNSTATE TO STAND FIRM ON "TAX LAW FIRST"

Will Make Cook Co. Relief Final Action Wait.

BY PARKE BROWN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., June 16.—[Special.]—War talk sounded through the chambers of the Illinois general assembly tonight as they were being swept out in preparation for the resumption of the special session tomorrow morning.

In spite of a reported willingness on the part of Gov. Louis L. Emmerson to give the bills for the financial relief of Chicago and Cook county the right of way, downstaters are determined that none of these measures will be passed until the resolution for the amendment of the tax article of the constitution is adopted by both houses.

Their prediction is that while an agreement may be reached whereby the Strawn committee's relief bills may be amended in the house tomorrow and advanced to third reading, downstate will not permit them to go a step further until action is taken in this chamber on the organic law proposal.

Tentative Changes First.

The outlook therefore is that the first legislative day will be spent in making agreed changes in the relief bills as proposed by the Strawn committee, and that on Wednesday consideration of the constitutional resolution will be forced by the downstate majority.

The proposal of the Chicago delegation is that the two subjects be brought up to a similar status. Both houses can pass the basic law resolution in one day and the Cook county representatives urge that the relief bills be advanced to a point where the same thing is true of them—that they be passed in the house and advanced to a third reading in the senate before a final vote in either chamber is taken on the amendment resolution.

Downstate members of the house tonight are unwilling to give this much ground and say they will make no agreement extending beyond tomorrow. Their present intention is to compel at least the revision of the constitutional amendment on Wednesday so that on that day it will be put into the form in which they intend to seek its adoption.

Agree On Some Provisions.

The resolution in its present form removes all the existing constitutional restrictions upon the legislature in tax matters. Even its most ardent proponents admit there must be some changes in this form. They agree that the present provision concerning exemption of property used for religious, charitable and educational purposes must be continued and that the amendment must not remove the restriction against the classification of real estate except mining land and land devoted to reforestation.

So far as is known there is no material opposition to either of these modifications of the resolution. But among the proposed amendments to the amendment before the recess taken twenty days ago were more than a dozen of the kind that will bring the battle between Cook county and most of downstate to a showdown.

Among these are amendments to restrict the state's share of an income tax to 10 per cent except by two-thirds vote, to prohibit the exercise of new tax imposing power except by two-thirds vote and to postpone the exercise of new powers granted under the amendment until the state has been reapportioned in conformity with the constitution.

It is admitted that the downstate majority can kill off this sort of amendments, but downstate itself admits that without these changes in the resolution it cannot be passed unless a score or so of Cook members change their positions.

TWO GUNMEN ROB GARAGE.

Two armed robbers walked into the Grand-Sacramento garage, 2918 West-Grand avenue, yesterday morning, took $2.12 from the Negro attendant, Lance Edinberg, and a $50 watch and $5 from Dr. J. B. Novak, 861 North Sacramento avenue, and escaped in a stored auto.

SENATE GROUP APPROVES LEGGE FOR 2D TERM

Washington, D. C., June 16.—[Special.]—The senate agriculture committee, without a dissenting vote, today recommended confirmation of the nominations of Chairman Alexander Legge and Charles C. Teague for second terms as members of the federal farm board. Their present one year terms expire July 1.

The unanimous action of the committee, which indicated favorable action by the senate within the next few days, caused a flurry of surprise among those who had forecast another attack on the farm board centering around the Legge nomination. Thirteen votes were cast against Mr. Legge's confirmation last October, including that of Senator George W. Norris [Rep., Neb.], a member of the agriculture committee.

Samuel R. McKelvie, wheat member of the board, is expected to resign on or about July 1, although his term runs for another year. It was said to have been understood at the time of his appointment that he might choose to retire at the end of his first year.

Among those mentioned as a possible successor to Mr. McKelvie is a prominent Illinois farm leader. Farm board officials, however, have declined to disclose his name.

celebrated Pabst brewery is a tale rich in irony—and fortitude.

Because the Milwaukee Public museum contains at least fifty pieces of the loveliest Wedgwood in America. I have been thrice to see them.

Because Dr. McGrath and Regent Berens put medical students through a new kind of examination.

Because Sim, a lion with a personality and a passion for human playmates, lives here.

Because Edward Augustus Fitzpatrick, one of the most stimulating men in American education, lives here.

Because the Public museum contains the superb Nunnenmacher collection of arms and armor, the largest collection of the kind in the United States. It comprises 2,200 pieces, and John Metschl's monograph about it makes two thick volumes that sell for $5 each.

Attractive Roadsides.

Because venerable Charles B. Whitnall, banker, is like a page out of Thoreau. As a result of the dreams of this gentle dreamer who makes dreams come true, Milwaukee is building eighty-four miles of highways into an area that is not a billboard-blemished, sluttish countryside, but like an environing park.

Because certain wise, patient, self-sacrificing scholars have transformed Marquette university from a kind of cultural and technical quick lunch into a real university which now is spoken of with respect even at the University of Chicago, where they have few illusions about anything or anybody.

Because I don't know of another large American city that sets more good examples in the administration of justice and the thrifty management of its affairs. In short, Milwaukee has character—and a conscience that makes its character function. "Good Lord!" exclaimed the ebullient Cooley, "you can have a public scandal in this town over $50!"

Population Not Everything.

Because if Milwaukee were Cologne, or Leipzig, or Dresden, which are not much larger, or Stockholm, which is smaller, and if they were only 80 miles away, you would gladly study them on the spot. For, after all, 'tis not huge population that makes a city interesting. The London of Shakespeare and Ben Jonson and Queen Elizabeth and Francis Bacon was less than one-third the present size of Milwaukee, and not until 1750 was it as large as Milwaukee is now. Yet it was always worth writing about.

Because near neighbors ought to be good neighbors and be interested in one another's achievements.

And because the editor told me to go. "Take your time," said he, "and be thorough." I have taken my time—and a very pleasant, instructive time it has been—and I was so interested that I could not help being thorough. I had interviews with all the living notables—including Sim—mentioned in this dispatch, and their vivid narratives are the impellents—so to speak—behind all the "becauses."

School Board Again Delays Action on Airport Lease

Final action on the proposed lease of school property at Clearing to the city for airport purposes was delayed again yesterday by the board of education. START MOVE FOR OPEN AIR THEATER ON CITY BEACH

At a joint meeting of three council committees and the Music Lovers' league yesterday it was decided to try to interest Chicagoans in underwriting a bond issue for the erection of an open air theater and convention hall on the city's Clarendon beach property. Twelve weeks of opera would be given during the summer at prices of not more than $1 a seat.

Plans for a build which would cost $1,250,000 were shown by City Architect Paul Gerhardt. The theater would seat 10,000 persons. By utilizing the existing building on the beach Sidney J. Glass of the Music Lovers' league believed that a building could be erected for $500,000.

According to Ald. Jacob M. Arvey [24th], chairman of the council music committee, any citizens who underwrote a bond issue would be repaid out of the revenues of the building. The city, he said, would take 10 per cent of the gross receipts, which would be devoted to developing community singing and local artistic talent.

TWO EXPELLED FOR RUNNING STOLEN QUIZ BUREAU AT COLLEGE

Lansing, Mich., June 16.—[Special.]—Because they admitted a plot to steal examination questions and furnish copies at $5 a set to students patronizing their "service," Robert E. and Arthur T. Faulkner, Middleville brothers, were expelled from Michigan State college today, it was announced by President Robert S. Shaw.

The youths were caught in the act of invading the mathematics department offices at midnight Saturday, and they confessed to their captor, Don Bremer, head of the campus police, that they were seeking the examination information. They were locked up in the East Lansing city jail over the week-end and were arraigned in justice court today.

Robert Faulkner, 20, was a junior liberal arts student, and Arthur, 18, was a freshman in the engineering school.

NO TRACE OF 8 MEN MISSING ON ERIE SPEED BOAT

Toledo, O., June 16.—(AP)—Hours of searching Lake Erie and its islands by boats and airplanes had failed tonight to reveal the fate of eight prominent Toledoans who disappeared Saturday while riding in a speed boat to Pelee island.

Whether the men were alive tonight—marooned on some island—or whether they perished in an accident was undetermined.

Examination today of the speedboat which was discovered yesterday, floating upright, its tow rope severed as if by a knife, leaves unanswered the question, "Did some one cut the rope deliberately to set the craft adrift from some island?"

The glass wings of the boat's windshield were broken, the propeller was bent and there was tar on the propeller shaft as if the boat had hit some sunken obstruction. The inside of the boat was dry. The power plant was still in gear. Three life preservers were missing.

GRANTED A DIVORCE FROM TYPEWRITER MAGNATE IN NEVADA

Reno, Nev., June 16.—(AP)—Mrs. Mary E. Smith was granted a divorce here today from George E. Smith of New York, former president of the Royal Typewriter company, on grounds of desertion.

Mrs. Smith sued Helen C. Meade for alienation of the affections of her husband and in turn was sued for divorce by Smith on grounds of infidelity in New York about a year ago. Smith lost his New York divorce action.

The Smiths were married in Buffalo, N. Y., in 1905. The complaint alleged the typewriter magnate deserted his wife in 1923.

A property settlement was made out of court and provides that Smith shall pay his divorced wife $7,200 a year for the remainder of her life.

Mrs. Marjorie Elliot Drayton was granted a divorce today from Harry Coleman Drayton, army aviator stationed at Hopolulu, on grounds of mental cruelty.

LEADERS TELL OF ENTHUSIASM FOR CAR PROJECT

Massmeeting Is Held by Ward Delegates.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Three hundred advocates of the proposed transportation franchise, representing every ward in the city, held a meeting in the city council chamber last night. They were the representatives selected by the aldermen to boost the ordinance in every community in Chicago. They listened to a dozen speeches in a session of more than two hours.

Ald. McDonough, chairman of the bipartisan committee favoring the ordinance, presided.

"This transit plan, based upon enabling legislation which was initiated by the council by a vote of 49 to 1 and embodied in the ordinance which the council adopted by a vote of 47 to 3," said McDonough, "will be of enormous benefit to Chicago. We believe that this ordinance means the advent of prosperity for the city."

Sprague Issues Warning.

"If this ordinance fails," said Col. A. A. Sprague, vice chairman of the citizens' traction settlement committee, "I believe it will be another ten years before a serious effort is made to obtain the transportation Chicago needs. More care and effort could not have been made to obtain a fair ordinance. No substantial reason has been found why any one should hesitate to recommend the acceptance of this ordinance."

"It is not debatable whether Chicago should have better transportation," said Mrs. William E. Lewis. "I believe in the men who recommend this ordinance, Walter L. Fisher, Col. Sprague, George Woodruff, Gen. Foreman, Joshua D'Esposito and Maj. Kelker. Their recommendation is good with me."

Attorney Fisher, chief draftsman of the ordinance, said: "There was no compromise of public interest in this ordinance. I have been amazed that no one has yet discovered a real defect in this proposed grant. No critic of it has made a single constructive suggestion for its improvement. Some of the charges against it are ridiculous."

Speaks for Working Women.

Mary McEnerney of the Bindery Women's union said that the working people are ready to vote for this ordinance.

"On the south side we are for the ordinance," said Isaac N. Powell, banker. "It will give us the first rapid transit facilities south of Sixty-third street since the World's Fair in 1933."

"On the west side we believe that the ordinance will aid in developing our business and make us more prosperous," said Otto H. Bers of the West Town Chamber of Commerce.

"Our directors voted for it, 38 to 1."

"Now is the time to dig and build," commented R. O. Byerrum of the Rogers Park Kiwanis club.

Mrs. Harry F. Atwood said: "The opportunity offered by this referendum is one that only come once in a generation. Better transportation will permit better home environment."

Jesse Binga, colored banker representing the South Side Midcenter Chamber of Commerce, said that he believed the ordinance would permit better service and supply more employment. These are needs which he said his people desire.

"The wage earners are more intensely interested in this ordinance than any other group," said Ald. Nelson, vice president of the Chicago Federation of Labor. "They are the car riders. They are interested in the development of the city."

"I believe this is the best ordinance ever submitted to a referendum in Chicago," said Ald. Thomas J. Bowler, former street car conductor.

Gen. Milton J. Foreman said: "This ordinance contains the things we dreamed of when the 1907 ordinance was drafted. We are asked to kick this ordinance in the waste paper basket by the apostles of the impossible, who make faces and say that some men are wicked. Why should the common scolds stop all progress."

MR. BROWN, MINER, TRIES TO BE POLITE, BUT HE'S KING'S ENVOY

EDINBURGH, Scotland, June 16.—(AP)—Royal red tape prevented James Brown, Scottish coal miner, whom the Labor government made lord high commissioner of the Church of Scotland, from doing an act of kindness during the church sessions here.

Looking over the assembled guests from his seat on the throne, he saw an elderly woman without a seat. Instantly he rose and was just going to find a seat for her when an official whispered to him:

"Send an order. Remember, you are representing the king and cannot leave the throne."

FRANCHISE FOES PUT STEAM INTO BALLOT BATTLE

Banners and Amplifiers Appeal to Crowds.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The opposition to the proposed transportation franchise steamed up yesterday.

The most conspicuous activity was the appearance down town of three autos with signs advising the public to vote against the ordinance. By means of an amplifier the loop crowds were told that "the grant is a perpetual franchise, wipes out the city's $61,000,000 traction fund, overvalues the transit properties by $50,000,000, provides for inadequate compensation, will certainly increase fares and should be defeated at the referendum July 1."

Carl D. Thompson said that one wagon was sponsored by the Cook county real estate board, another by the People's Traction league, and the third by the citizens' committee against the traction ordinance.

A taxpayer's suit, with Henry Ashton as attorney, was started in the Superior court to obtain an injunction against the special referendum election. The bill charges that the council order setting aside $246,576 for the cost of the election is illegal.

Richberg Renews Attack.

Donald Richberg took another whack at the ordinance. His statement, of which a summary was printed in THE TRIBUNE yesterday, had been called "villification and vicious" by Ald. Jacob Arvey in the same issue. Richberg called Arvey's reply libelous and he made an attack on the alderman.

"It is annoying, but not fatal, to be bitten by one of Mr. Insull's trained fleas," wrote Richberg yesterday. "If Mr. Insull cannot speak for himself and accept personal responsibility for libelous statements, he should not expect the public to believe them.

"I know the people are paying Mr. Arvey, as an alderman and chairman of the city council gas committee, to protect them against Mr. Insull's gas company. The records of the court, the state commission, and the city council, show that my work (as attorney in the gas litigation) helped to prevent increases in gas rates, which would average about $2,000,000 a year during my 12 years of service.

"The gas valuation case was a victory worth about $50,000,000 which Mr. Arvey conveniently forgets. These records also show that I received less than $10,000 a year for my services. Before Ald. Arvey is qualified to act as a critic of my public services he ought to get himself a reputation for serving the public—not the public utilities."

Reiterates His Charges.

His statement reiterates his charges against Samuel Insull, Corporation Counsel Ettelson, and Mayor Thompson, and concludes:

"The adoption of the traction ordinance on July 1 would be the supreme triumph of Insull-Ettelson-Thompson politics. To vote down the ordinance will be to repudiate this political misrule—to defeat the triple alliance of greed, graft and bunk."

The opposition is planning a huge massmeeting on the northwest side for the residents of the Forty-sixth, Forty-seventh, Forty-eighth, and Forty-ninth wards.

Carl D. Thompson said yesterday that the opposition is gaining strength. The South Side Business Men's association, which meets twice a month at the Lincoln center, has gone on record in opposition to the ordinance on the ground that the transit properties are over-valued, return to city is inadequate, franchise is a perpetuality, the company's obligations are vague, and the cost of the subway bill is on the public.

Among the other organizations announced as opposing the ordinance are the Public Ownership league, the Liberal club, Logan Square Businessmen's association, and the Chicago Teachers federation.

Led by Girl, Bandits Seize $56,250; Lock Trio in Vault

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WARSAW, Poland, June 16.—Led by a beautiful girl, six masked bandits broke into the Lodz Commerce bank, overpowered Cashier Przedpelski and two officials, locking them in a safe, and escaped with $56,250. The manager of the bank, who was accidentally passing at midnight, summoned the police and after several hours the safe doors were opened, freeing the nearly suffocated officials.

CHINA ASSASSIN CLAIMS GENERAL WAS INSTIGATOR

Says He Was Promised Post for Murder.

BY JOHN POWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, June 16.—Gen. Lu Huan-yen, military governor of Kwangsi province, who was murdered at Canton yesterday, was shot by one of his own bodyguard named Fung Ming-shing, to whom Gen. Lu had entrusted his own revolver while eating dinner. The assassin was captured and confessed. He said that the killing was instigated by Gen. Bei-tsung-chi, leader of the Kwangsi forces attempting to capture Hankow, in Hunan province.

The assassin said Gen. Bei had promised him $10,000 and a post as regimental commander of the Kwangsi forces for murdering Gen. Lu, who was Gen. Bei's chief political opponent and whom Gen. Bei held responsible for the downfall and defeat of the Kwangsi troops in their own province.

South China Shocked.

While political murders are frequent occurrences, the killing of Gen. Lu has produced a shock in south China politics, since Gen. Lu had been invited to Canton by the Cantonese leaders to discuss pacification of Kwangsi province.

A report from Nanking tonight claims that the Kwangsi and Ironsides troops are being surrounded by President Chiang Kai-shek's army in Hunan province, and that the situation is not serious, despite attempts by communists to create a reign of terror in the Hankow area.

A Japanese Regno news service report today said Chiang Kai-shek was withdrawing his forces from Hunan province along the Peiping-Hankow railway in order to defend Hankow against the Kwangsi rebels. Gen. Chiang's headquarters, however, denies this report.

Britisher Gets Customs Post.

Lennox Simpson, or, to use his better known pen name, "Putnam Weale," well known British writer and novelist, has been appointed customs commissioner of Tientsin by Gen. Yen Hsi-shan, head of the northern military coalition against the Nationalist government.

According to a report from Tientsin, Mr. Simpson assumed charge of the Tientsin customs office while the previous commissioner, appointed by the Nanking government, fled into the British consulate for protection. Gen. Yen had long threatened to seize the Tientsin customs' revenues for his war chest.

Dr. C. T. Wang, foreign minister, said last week that there was a possibility that the Nationalist government might close the port of Tientsin and remove the customs archives to Dairen and Tsingtao, and require that foreign vessels destined to Tientsin call at Dairen and Tsingtao in order to pay the duties ordinarily assessed at Tientsin.

Techny Missionary Freed.

Washington, D. C., June 16.—(AP)—The state department today received word of the release of the Rev. Clifford King, American missionary of Techny, Ill., who was captured by Chinese bandits a week ago. He was unharmed.

Appeal of Stepfather Frees Girl Who Shot Him

Miss Dorothy Tulley, 19 years old, was freed yesterday in the Felony court when she showed Judge John Sbarbaro a letter from her step-father, Sergt. Ray Grable, saying that he did not desire to prosecute her for shooting him. Grable will recover. The shooting occurred three weeks ago in the Grable home at 922 East 61st street. Both the girl and Grable said later that it was accidental.

AIMEE ESCAPES PAYING FINE, BUT NOT EXTRA DUTY

Customs Agents Treat Her Kindly.

New York, June 16.—[Special.]—Uncle Sam today took lenient view of Aimee Semple McPherson's failure to declare the "few simple dresses" she bought in Paris on her recent visit here, and only assessed her $138.55—the original cost of the dresses, plus the duty. No fine was imposed.

Explanation Accepted.

The Los Angeles evangelist, whose baggage was seized on her arrival on the Europa Saturday when the undeclared dresses were discovered, appeared before Assistant Solicitor George Brewer this morning and explained that she had failed to declare them because she had been misinformed.

"I was told that if you bought clothes for yourself abroad and wore them you didn't have to declare them," she said.

Mr. Brewer was sympathetic. He understood. So this time he merely would assess her the regular duty on undeclared goods. If he had imposed a fine she would have had to pay twice the whole amount, $277.10.

Uses Private Exit.

Deputy Surveyor Louis J. Hoenninger, who was present, gallantly offered to escort Mrs. McPherson to the collector's office, where she paid the $138.55. Then Mr. Hoenninger volunteered to show her the private office of Collector Philip J. Elting, which has a private exit. Mrs. McPherson used this exit to escape from a number of photographers who were waiting for her in the outside office. She will proceed to Los Angeles in a few days.

DELAY ACTION ON WEST COAST DIRIGIBLE BASE

Washington, D. C., June 16.—[Special.]—The house naval affairs committee today by a vote of 11 to 8 postponed until fall definite action on the Pacific dirigible base situation. Two bills now are before the committee for action. One of the measures would locate the new airship base at Camp Kearney, San Diego, while the other calls for construction of the base at Sunnyvale, San Francisco.

Inability of the California congressmen to reach an agreement as to where the new base schould be located was largely responsible for the decision to postpone action until further data could be obtained from the navy department. Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of the bureau of aeronautics, favors locating the base at San Francisco while the navy general board favors Camp Kearney.

BABY, SHOT IN BRAIN, IS BETTER AFTER OPERATION

Despite a bullet imbedded in his brain, Baby Laurence Stensland, 6 weeks old son of Oscar J. Stensland, 6660 Octavia avenue, apparently was improving last night, following an operation on Saturday at the Children's Memorial hospital.

The baby was shot on June 4 while in the arms of its mother in front of their home. Theodore Desiderio, 15 years old, 6727 Octavia avenue, told the police he fired a .22 caliber bullet while target shooting. He is being held at the Juvenile Detention home until his case comes up in court on June 23.

3 WHO HELPED STEAL $3,700,000 GET LIBERTY, JOBS

Lansing, Mich., June 16.—[Special.]—Three of the group of former employes and officers of the Union Industrial bank at Flint, convicted of embezzling nearly $3,700,000 from that institution last fall, will be paroled June 27, it was disclosed here today by Richard W. Nebel, commissioner of pardons and paroles.

The trio to be released received minimum sentences of six months' imprisonment at Jackson state penitentiary, with maximum penalties placed at 20 years. Their minimum terms, with good time, are now expiring, the parole commissioner said, and as they have already been assured positions of trust when they are released, it was decided to free them as soon as possible. The three are: Robert P. Brown, son of Grant Brown, former president of the bank, who was recently acquitted of a charge growing out of the defalcation, but who faces several other charges; Robert H. D. McDonald and Clifford A. Plumb.

A. J. Schlosser, who was sentenced to serve from 1 to 20 years, was also given a hearing, Nebel said, and will probably be paroled if the sanction of Judge Frank S. Parker of Genesee county, who sentenced him, is obtained.

BOY HELD AS BURGLAR.

Joseph Wall, 17 years old, 1435 Fry street, member of a gang of boys blamed for many burglaries, most of them accomplished through smashing windows, was held to the grand jury yesterday in the Boys' court, in bond of $8,000.

He Hated to take off his Hat!

A Message Every Man Should Read

Until . . .

He went to Thomas'

TOM THOMPSON* was not vain, nor was he conceited about his personal appearance. He found that his lack of hair actually hindered his business progress. Not infrequently would he be fully prepared to make a masterful sales presentation to a prospective customer only to be balked when he removed his hat and exposed his bald head. Friends "wise-cracked" about it and although new acquaintances and business prospects did not boldly mention it, Tom knew they were thinking, "Too bad he had to take off his hat—he looked so much better—so much younger with it on."

In Tom's case baldness actually cost him money. No matter how forceful were his sales arguments, he could not keep his customer's eyes off his bald head. Finally he came to The Thomas'—was accepted for treatment after a scientific scalp examination and now a growth of new hair covers his scalp in a natural manner. The Thomas' have relieved him of the embarrassment of baldness.

You, too, should call at a Thomas' office for a free scalp examination. If your hair is falling—let Thomas' stop it. If you have a scalp disorder which is causing dandruff or itching scalp—let Thomas' overcome these troubles. If your hair is thin or even if you are bald—let Thomas' help you regrow your hair. Thomas' treatment is proved by 16 years of success and now is administered to more than 1600 men each day. You will not be accepted for treatment unless The Thomas specialist is reasonably sure you will receive the results which you expect. Remember—no charge is made for the scalp examination at any time.

When your hair begins to recede at the temple (1) frontal (2), or get thin on the crown (3), nature is painlessly warning you that you have been neglecting your scalp and baldness is surely approaching. Heed this positive warning and save your hair by having The Thomas' correct the scalp disorder that is causing your loss of hair.

JULIAN LAMAR, PAINTER, WINS RENO DIVORCE

Reno, Nev., June 16.—[Special.]—Julian Lamar, well known portrait painter today was awarded a default divorce decree from Lucy Lamar after he had testified that she constantly nagged him and impugned his business motives in his professional conduct.

He charged she was extravagant, that she opened his mail and on several occasions took his personal checks and cashed them after endorsing his name upon them and appropriated the money to her own use. On one occasion she withdrew a large sum from his bank account without his knowledge, he said, which greatly embarrassed him.

RICH YACHTSMEN LOSE $200,000 IN SHIPYARD FIRE

New York, June 16.—[Special.]—A property loss estimated at more than $200,000, much of it in trophies, sails and other ship equipment owned by Otto C. Kahn, William G. Vanderbilt, Walter P. Chrysler, and other millionaire yacht owners, was caused today by a fire in the Robert Jacob shipyard, City Island, the Bronx.

The fire destroyed the two story frame building which occupied most of the 75 foot pier.

In addition to this building another which was the winter home of the Vanitie, Gerard B. Lambert's America's cup trial yacht, was lost.

REDS TERRORIZE TOWN IN FRANCE; CALL FOR TROOPS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BAYONNE, France, June 16.—With 1,500 striking factory workers threatening to attack the plant in which they were formerly employed, and with insufficient police reserves to maintain order, the population of the town of le Boucau, which is near here, is demanding that the government send the Republican guards to preserve peace.

The workers, who organized under the directions of Moscow Communist leaders, seized the steel works of Forges de Adour at the end of April because they were refused a 20 cents a day wage boost. The Reds wrecked machinery and threatened to set fire to the buildings, and on May 1 held a big demonstration, but police prevented disturbances.

The strikers are parading the streets singing the Internationale, the Red Flag, and other Communist hymns, with the residents terrified. Today the Reds placarded this city, demanding all workers strike.

Feed Them Right and How They Grow

Look at this proud mother and father measuring their boy's height on Thompson's Life Line Chart. No wonder they are happy!

Two years ago the lad was two inches under average height for his age—and even ten pounds under weight for his height. But now he's up to normal in height and even a few pounds over average in weight. How did this boy make this astonishing progress?

Just one simple change accomplished the whole thing. Instead of urging him to drink a glass of raw milk two or three times a day. Mother added two teaspoonfuls of Thompson's Chocolate Malted Milk to the raw milk. After that he needed no urging.

The added food value in Thompson's gave this boy the extra nourishment he needed to grow at the proper rate. Sturdier bones and stronger muscles came naturally. His stomach very easily handled the additional food in this form, because Thompson's "Double Malted" process makes the most quickly digestible food.

Is your boy or girl up to average? It is important for you to know this, so Thompson's have made it easy for you with their famous Life Line Chart. Read offer at right.

Serve at Home

Thompson's now prepare a special "Double Malted" Malted Milk already mixed with powdered chocolate to serve at home in a jiffy. Two teaspoonfuls in a glass of milk—a little shaking—that's all. Your druggist or grocer will be glad to deliver right now, today, the one pound can of this new Thompson's Chocolate "Double Malted". Order it now. Give it to your children for luncheon. It's so delicious it will make them eager for that best of all foods—milk. And it will do wonders for their health because Thompson's adds 76% to the food value of milk. 'Phone your grocer or druggist now.

"Flies are highly dangerous"

says The United States Public Health Service

When children come down sick with typhoid or summer complaint, which kills more than 1/5 of the children who die under five, what is the cause? Often the disease has been brought into the home by flies. The government calls the common fly, "the worst of all man's natural enemies," because "there can be no doubt of the house fly's responsibility for much sickness and many deaths."

Be comfortable and safe. Keep your home insect-free. Spray Flit, which is guaranteed (or money back) to be quick death to flies, mosquitoes, moths, roaches, bed bugs and other household insects. Yet its clean-smelling vapor is harmless to humans.

Flit kills quicker if you use the special inexpensive Flit Sprayer. Insist on Flit and don't accept a substitute. Get yours today!

Flit is sold only in this yellow can with the black band.

"Forget the Hair and Treat the Scalp."

The above was the heading for an article written by one of the most famous beauty authorities; no truer statement ever appeared in print, and it substantiates all we have claimed in our advertising. We have always stated—"Cleanse the scalp of dandruff so the pores can breathe, then the hair will take care of itself." Dandruff is the killer of hair beauty, get rid of it. Here's a simple, sure, safe way—get a little liquid Calonite from your druggist, use it like you would a shampoo, notice just after one application how clean your scalp is. Try this every day for a few days, then once a week will keep your scalp free and clean and your hair will take care of itself.

MOUNTED POLICE RIDE DOWN INDIA PICKET "ARMY"

Many Hurt in Bombay Clash; 100 Arrested.

BY CHARLES DAILEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BOMBAY, June 16.—Mounted police, wielding light sticks, rode down civil disobedience volunteers here today in an intensive 12-hour effort to picket British shops. Many wounded were removed to hospitals and over 100 were arrested. The prisoners were at once sentenced to two months' imprisonment.

Further disturbances are anticipated for tomorrow. The Nationalist "war council" has announced picketing will be resumed on a gigantic scale when the shops reopen. Sixty thousand Ghandi followers have pledged to replace the pickets as quickly as they fall wounded, or are arrested.

Thousands Paralyze Traffic.

In today's picketing "war," police found great trouble dealing with the thousands of spectators trying to reach the scene of disturbances. Cheering for Mahatma Gandhi, the crowd massed about picketed shops and paralyzed traffic.

Police and military chiefs met tonight to map out a plan to keep the streets free of Indians. Even the Nationalists did their best to keep traffic open for foreigners today, but were trampled on by the unmanageable crowd. Indian merchants are considering closing their shops for a month.

Roswell Russell, correspondent for the Baltimore Post, was driven from the street and then from a balcony by police after a complaint had been lodged against him by an English firm, which accused him of wearing homespun and therefore being in direct sympathy with the freedom movement.

Monsoon Checks Revolt.

The writer, declaring he was wearing a suit made in Baltimore, lodged a formal protest against the police.

With the arrival of the monsoon season, or perennial rain, activities of the Nationalist volunteers are expected to be curbed momentarily.

U. S. DRY LAW OFFICER TRIED IN OKLAHOMA ON MURDER CHARGE

Guthrie, Okla., June 16.—[Special.]—The battle of federal officials to save a prohibition enforcement officer from prison was started here today when W. W. "Snake" Thomason went on trial charged with the murder of James C. Harris, farmer, of Pottawatomie county, who was killed during a dry raid on last July 4.

The jury which is trying the case is composed of eight farmers, three merchants, and one banker.

Opening statements were made by attorneys for the prosecution and defense, the jury being completed late in the afternoon. Randall Pitman, Pottawatomie county prosecuting attorney, said the state would prove Thomason led the raid on the farm and, with a posseman, Jef D. Harris, fired shots at the farmer who stood with hands in air begging for his life. Pitman declared that Earl Harris, 7 year old son of the slain farmer, witnessed the shooting from bushes.

The defense, which is led by Roy St. Lewis, federal district attorney, told the jury that Thomason was not on the place at the time the shooting started and said the raid was not made under his order.

Jeff Harris, who is serving a sentence of fifty years in the state prison for the murder of Oscar Lowrey, brother-in-law of James Harris, who was killed in the same raid, has been called by the state as a witness.

The two farmers, both world war veterans, were shot down at the farm home of Harris during a dry raid in which no liquor was found. Charges of murder against Thomason and Jeff Harris were first filed in the state court, but because he was an officer Thomason obtained a transfer of his case to the federal court.

MICHELSON GOES TO RESUME TEST OF LIGHT SPEED

Eager to begin work on the final phase of his famous experimentation with the speed of light, begun 51 years ago, Prof. Albert A. Michelson of the University of Chicago left Chicago yesterday for Santa Ana, Cal., where he will race beams of light through a mile long vacuum tube.

Accompanying Prof. Michelson to California, where they will spend the summer, was Mrs. Michelson. They left on the Santa Fé's Chief. The 77 year old physicist, who recently resigned his active faculty duties to become professor emeritus, apparently had recovered completely from the illness and two operations which last fall threatened his life, and expressed himself as anxious to get to work on his experiment.

Prof. Michelson, on returning to the Midway in the autumn, will devote himself to research, spending his time in his old laboratory in Ryerson hall.

KING CAROL LAYS PLANS FOR GRAND CORONATION FETE

Ceremony Will Be Held Next October.

BUCHAREST, June 16.—(AP)—Now that Carol II. has swept all obstacles from his path to a full and valid kingship of Rumania, he made plans today for an impressive coronation that will be the last triumph in the journey of an exile to a throne.

Two weeks ago Carol was a private citizen in a foreign land, divorced from his wife, with the throne of his father—which he renounced four years earlier—occupied by his own 8 year-old son.

Coronation in October.

Today Carol Caraiman is King Carol II., his divorce is recognized as morally nonexistent by the Rumanian Orthodox church, his wife, whom he proclaimed Queen Helene, is reported near a reconciliation with him, and his son is merely a carefree little crown prince.

The coronation will be the last and most brilliant event in the series of developments. It will be held at Albajulia, where the late King Ferdinand was crowned, and has been set for October. It is believed likely that Oct. 11 will be the date, for it was on that day, in 1914, that his father, King Ferdinand I., became monarch of the Balkan kingdom.

Will Invite Crowned Heads.

King Carol intends to invite all the crowned heads and presidents of Rumanian world war allies to the event. Today he commissioned Gen. Presan, an outstanding soldier, who attempted to form a cabinet last week, and Prof. Nicholas Jorga, his boyhood tutor and friend, to deliver the invitations personally.

Both will leave Rumania June 30, Prof. Jorga going to London and Washington, D. C., and Gen. Presan visiting Belgrade, Rome, Brussels and Paris.

RE-ELECT HEADS OF CARPENTERS' DISTRICT COUNCIL

Thomas Flynn and Charles H. Sands have been reelected as president and secretary, respectively, of the Chicago Carpenters' District council. The carpenters' council is one of the largest in the American labor movement. J. Arthur Palmgren, John R. Stevenson and Anton Johansen were reelected business agents. William Brims, George W. Harrison, Warner Johansen and Roy Wolfe were named for the arbitration board.

At its last meeting the Building Trades council discussed proposals for a five day week and it is said that action will be taken when differences between the council and the building contractors have been eliminated.

125,000 VOTERS SIGN TO RECALL DETROIT'S MAYOR

Protection of Gambling Is Charged.

Detroit, Mich., June 16.—[Special.]—More than 125,000 of Detroit's 425,000 voters have signed petitions to recall from office Mayor Charles Bowles, elected last November on a reform platform and who has held the post of chief executive since Jan. 1. These petitions were being checked today and will be filed with the city clerk possibly Thursday afternoon. Thousands of petitions have been thrown out as a result of forgeries, and great care is being taken to check every signature in anticipation of a court fight.

Bowles' recall is being sought for numerous reasons, but chief among these is his dismissal of Police Commissioner Harold H. Emmons, a month ago. Emmons was dismissed from office, 48 hours after he raided seven downtown gambling dives. These raids were made on information provided by newspaper reporters.

Gambling Places Open.

Immediately after Bowles took office downtown gambling establishments which had been closed for more than three years reopened. Photographs of gambling places, taken from the mayor's office in the city hall, were published, but no action was taken by the chief executive.

Emmons, an outstanding lawyer, insisted that his men reported no gambling places open, and finally consented to allow newspaper men to take his detectives into the places. These raids were made on the afternoon of the Kentucky Derby, and 300 arrested. Bowles dismissed Emmons on Tuesday.

Charges in Recall Petitions.

The recall petitions cites the following reasons for the removal of the chief executive:

He has tolerated lawlessness by law enforcement agencies.

Delegated to Frank Dohany, an attorney financially interested in claims against the street railway, control of the street railway's claims department.

Gave Gillespie, professional lobbyist and bondsman, control of Detroit's public works program with power to deal with contractors who had made him wealthy—and paving costs to the homebuilder increased 20 cents per yard in days of financial distress.

Gave Gillespie official direction of public garbage disposal despite Gillespie's long private monopoly of this business.

Destroyed efficient public service through dismissal of faithful employés.

Threatened success of municipal ownership by attempted increase in car riders' fares and unwarranted discharge of Street Railway Commissioner Couzens.

Failed to Keep Pledge.

Made people fifteen pledges before election and again at inauguration; kept none.

Directed that public records be kept secret.

Seeks to weld street railway and other city employés into political machine by manipulation of patronage and public funds.

Hindered the police commissioner, Harold H. Emmons, in his enforcement of the law by taking control of the vice squad from his jurisdiction and later discharged him for enforcing the law while the mayor was out of town.

Under Michigan law an election on the recall must be called within 25 days of the filing of the petition.

SUICIDE FAILS; THEN HE DIES.

Anthony Recupidor, 24 years old, 2858 Fairmont avenue, who in a suicidal attempt two weeks ago slightly wounded himself in the head, died yesterday at his home of a heart attack.

LONDON, June 16.—Mounted police were necessary to keep back the huge crowds which gathered in the pouring rain outside of St. Margaret's church in Westminster today to witness the marriage of Lady Lettice Lygon, the most popular bridesmaid in London society, and Richard Cottell of the Royal Horse guard. The bride is the eldest daughter of the earl and countess of Beauchamps.

SEES SCIENTIST AND WOMAN ON LONELY ISLAND

San Pedro, Cal., June 16.—[Special.]—C. S. Howard, San Francisco yachtsman, arrived here today aboard his 197 foot yacht from the Galapagos islands.

Mr. Howard said he had visited with Dr. Ritter, Berlin scinetist, who retired to one of the secluded Galapagos group, and had also seen Frau Dorn, the German woman, who accompanied the scientist in his back to nature journey.

"The doctor and the woman were in the nude when we first saw them, but they put on clothes and greeted us," Howard said. They were almost irrational in their joy at seeing us." I asked the doctor if they ever planned to return to civilization. Dr. Ritter said he thought of it, but she says no. Howard had six guests aboard his yacht, which set out from Florida early this year. He continues to San Francisco tomorrow.

Why does ELECTROLUX use a gas flame to freeze?

IT is quite natural for you to wonder about such a paradox as heat making ice.

The explanation is simple. All automatic refrigerators use the same principle in producing cold. They circulate a liquid refrigerant—most of them by machinery.

But the inventors of Electrolux found they could achieve the same result by a simpler method. They replaced all machinery with a tiny gas flame and used heat to circulate the refrigerant. That is why your Electrolux operates without sound, without mechanical trouble, and at lower cost.

In this refrigerator the tiny gas flame (little larger than a pilot light) changes the liquid refrigerant to vapor. A trickle of water condenses it back again. This simple cycle is all there is to the operation. The refrigerant is hermetically sealed in solid metal—it never needs renewal. It circulates continuously—there is no starting and stopping. The cold is constant—it never comes and goes. You have ice for life, a perfect low temperature in this refrigerator at all times.

Electrolux uses only a little gas and water. Both are cheap. That is why this refrigerator can be operated for less money than you probably now spend for ice. Much less, in fact. Only a few pennies a day even for the largest size. The exact amount depends upon your local gas and water rates. Think of the saving you make!

Electrolux operates without noise because it has nothing to make noise—no moving parts at all. And it continues to work just as silently for life, because there is nothing to wear, to vibrate, to need attention as time goes on. Even the little gas flame has an automatic shut-off that prevents the flow of unlighted gas.

All this may make you wonder whether Electrolux is expensive to buy.

Far from that. Priced about the same, size for size, as other automatic refrigerators. $195 to $430 F. O. B. Evansville. Complete line of models. Colors as well as white. Very liberal purchase terms.

See this marvelous new refrigerator at the display rooms listed below. And mail the coupon for complete, illustrated information.

The roadway stretches into the distance—beckoning . . . Beside it the copper telephone wires glow warmly in the sunlight—beckoning. The hum of the motor and the hum of the wires—one pulling you toward new adventure, the other turning your thoughts toward your "folks" at home.

Along the highway a bit you will see a little sign with that familiar Blue Bell insignia. If you will stop there, home is only seconds away! Those same wires that have followed you all this way are waiting to whisk you back for a pleasant chat with your family and "the bunch."

All along your route you can make these cheerful calls. You'll be surprised how much they add to your peace of mind and the success of your trip! "Fish stories" are more credible if told right after "the catch." Tell them by telephone! Long distance is Quick, Clear and Inexpensive.

THE TRACTION ORDINANCE.
I. CLEARING THE ATMOSPHERE.

After the city council had voted approval of the new traction ordinance, THE TRIBUNE announced that its columns were open alike to those who favored the ordinance and those who opposed it. We have taken the position that the voters of Chicago constitute a jury to accept or reject the ordinance at the referendum on July 1. The advocates of the ordinance and the opposition have been given an opportunity to present and interpret the evidence to that jury. The time has come for a summing up.

Much of the argument, as was to be anticipated, has been extraneous to the real issues as we see them. Many appeals have been made to prejudice. Old slogans, unchanged from the time they were coined a generation ago, have been brought into the discussion. There has been much talk of personalities, much though not all of it irrelevant.

We need waste little time on the slogans, but the question of personalities is of considerable importance. Inevitably the ordinance will reflect the aims of the men who determined what was to go into it. It is charged that these men were Mr. Samuel Insull on the one hand and Mayor Thompson and his appointees in the corporation counsel's office on the other. It is further said that Mr. Insull has in the past contributed to the political campaign funds collected for the Thompson machine; that the corporation counsel, Mr. Ettelson, was formerly retained by Mr. Insull; and that Mr. Ettelson's former law partners are still of counsel for Mr. Insull. Had the public's interest actually been represented by Mr. Ettelson or any other figure in the present city administration, we should find it impossible to support the measure.

As a matter of fact, the city administration was not active in the negotiations. The public interest has been represented by Mr. Walter Fisher, acting as special counsel for United States District Judge Wilkerson, in whose court one of the surface lines is in receivership. Mr. Fisher had the coöperation of a committee of citizens also appointed by the court. The enabling legislation upon which the ordinance is based was drafted by the citizens' committee after negotiation with the representatives of the car companies; the valuation of Mr. Insull's elevated lines was also the committee's work. Neither the legislation nor the ordinance can be regarded as the handiwork of either Mr. Insull or the city administration or both together. The city hall has accepted the ordinance and so has Mr. Insull, but the implications of acceptance are quite different from those of authorship.

So much to clear the atmosphere. The ordinance may be viewed either as engineering, pure and simple, or as an essay in political science.

As a matter of fact, it partakes of both and something besides. It is a business deal, a contract, between the car riders and the owners of the transportation facilities. Engineering and political questions enter into the agreement, but the ordinance as a whole should be examined as a business man would examine a business contract negotiated for him by his lawyers.

Much of the discussion to date has been of the engineering features, and most of that discussion has dealt with the extensions to be built in the outlying districts. Some neighborhoods did not get all they wanted, but the communities which were satisfied are in the great majority. It is significant that there has been little criticism of the plans in the more thickly settled sections of the city. As a matter of fact, these plans with minor modifications have been embodied in most of the settlement proposals put forward in a decade. The downtown subways, the Ashland avenue elevated line, the elevated extensions on Milwaukee avenue, Stony Island avenue and elsewhere have been agreed upon by almost all the many transportation engineers who have given thought to Chicago's problem. These are the projects from which the greatest benefits will flow to all the people. Still, if any voter regards a particular extension as essential to a good settlement, he must vote against the ordinance if his extension is not included.

Likewise, any voter who regards immediate municipal ownership as of the first importance must vote against this agreement. To the extent that the ordinance is an essay in political science it is a flat commitment against municipal ownership, for the present at least. This ordinance does not forbid the city to take over the properties, but it does make it virtually impossible to do so in the immediate future, unlikely in the middle distance, and possible, if at all, only a generation hence. For our part, we regard this aspect of the agreement as altogether desirable, and we believe that the great majority of Chicago voters take the same view. The quality of Chicago's municipal government of recent years is all the argument needed to convince most citizens of the unwisdom of giving that government any more financial responsibilities.

The ordinance, in our view, is a business contract, arranged between interests which are mutually dependent. Reduced to barest essentials, what the car riders want is more rapid, more comfortable and more frequent service at little, if any, increase in fare, service which will be the best that transportation engineers can provide and which will penetrate all sections of the city. Looking farther ahead, car riders want a transportation system which will always be up to date in its physical plant and will grow with the city's growth.

What the company wants is security for the existing investment and for a further $200,000,000 to be spent in extensions and improvements. The company wants fares adjusted to meet interest and dividend requirements, with a margin of safety to enable it to obtain more money from investors on favorable terms as it is needed.

Now these aims, though not identical, are not conflicting. The ordinance should be an attempt to secure the objectives of both parties without injury to either and with advantage to both. The voters will do well to study the terms to see how the aims of the two parties have been met. For our part, we are persuaded that the ordinance is fair to both sides. We shall make a more detailed examination of the provisions in subsequent editorials.

FREEDOM OF THE PRESS IN LOUISIANA.

Gov. Huey P. Long of Louisiana has given an administration criticized by every reputable newspaper in the state. In retaliation upon the opposition he has had introduced in the legislature a bill to license persons and firms "selling space for, or printing, in daily newspapers advertising matter for pay," the license fee to be 15 per cent of the gross business.

The development of the newspaper as a reliable critic of public affairs and their administrators has been attended in recent years by political attempts to restrict or suppress the freedom to do so. The effort has had a wide range. In Canton, O., the editor of such a newspaper was murdered to protect the corruption he was exposing. In Minnesota a paper was suppressed under a law passed for the purpose of stopping criticism and exposure by injunction. In Louisiana it is proposed to lay a heavy tax on advertising, not as a revenue act but as punishment of deserved criticism and as intimidation. Here in Chicago when there was more confidence in the city hall there was an attempt to suppress exposure by having the city sue for damages, THE TRIBUNE being the newspaper involved in this scheme to use the courts and the taxpayers' money to prevent criticism of the abuse of it.

All these attempts are confessions that publicity in newspaper columns is the opposition most feared by unscrupulous politics. The Louisiana bill is an approach to the oldest method of government control of publicity, the licensing of the owner of a printing press thus giving the crown censorship of the output. The escape from this is woven into the struggle for rights and liberties. A free government means a free press.

The partisan newspaper which protected administrative rascality for reasons of party regularity or for favors is in a decline. It was unable to compete with the free newspaper which recognized the position of trust in which it stood to its readers. Gang politics has perceived the danger in this situation and it has been trying to reassert the doctrine of government control of publication and set up an indirect censorship by one pretext or another, by intimidation in Minnesota, by a license system in Louisiana.

A people informed of their stake in the matter will not permit their own protections to be weakened and the powers of misgovernment to be strengthened by laws intended to suppress publicity and protect corruption.

GEN. DAWES AS MAJOR DOMO.

Gen. Dawes, ambassador to Great Britain, returning to the United States, says the naval treaty is a good one, that it allows a reduction in expenses, promotes peace, gives the United States and Great Britain equality in sea power, puts Japan in a position where it can be amiable and free of fears without being dangerous, and is altogether an admirable document in the onward and upward progress of the human family. The general was a member of the American delegation to the conference, but not as an expert in the matter directly in hand. He was the major domo of the state department and present in the negotiations as such. His function was to strengthen Mr. Stimson and the administration on any treaty by opening the court of St. James's to ambitious American families.

He was to make any treaty a good treaty, and all he can report in Washington or to the country at large is upon the discharge of this function, with regard to which Mr. Stimson may be satisfied.

The Other Side

REAPPORTIONMENT.
[Rock Island Argus.]

It is inevitable, perhaps, that some time the state must be reapportioned. The problem before downstate legislators is to satisfy Chicago's reasonable demands in the way of laws that will provide needed financial relief, bring about a condition of affairs in which it will be possible to usher into being a better taxation system, and at the same time not turn the state over to Chicago bag and baggage.

Chicago should be willing to accept a status similar to that of New York City, which is not vested with control over the entire state of New York. Twelve states have limited large cities in their representation in the legislature in both houses. According to the constitution adopted by New York state in 1894, which is still in force, it is provided that no county shall have more than one-third of the senators. The house is to consist of 150 members and each of the 61 counties except Hamilton is to have a representative. The remaining 90 members are distributed among the larger counties. Greater New York is made up of five counties. It has 23 of the total of 51 senators and 62 of the 150 house members. Limitations of representation of big cities prevail in Rhode Island, Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania, and several other states wherein are great cities.

Chicago, by insisting that reapportionment should be attached to the question of tax revision, is acting unfairly. Reapportionment is necessary. Downstate is willing to concede that. But downstate demands that Chicago should accept some sort of limitation. That is a reasonable demand. The principle of limited representation is universally recognized—save in Chicago.

TREATING LEG ULCERS.

A MAN applied to a North Carolina clinic for ulcers of his leg. "Mah blood's bad," he explained, as he began to unwind oozy rags from his leg.

"Ah done everything dey tol' me. Ah put on collard leaves and vinegar, bread mash, fish meal, and kerosene oil. I got a black salve at a drug sto'. I tried spider webs, turpentine, and side meat. Ah done everything anybody tol' me to do and here I is no better'n ah wuz."

A neglected sore on the legs may not have been neglected in one sense of the word. There is a fair chance that at one time or other the ulcers were treated with a poultice. Germs feed and multiply under the warm, moist culture medium which goes by the name of a poultice. Side meat, or some other form of fat meat, helped to make boils, carbuncles, and ulcers worse for our grandfathers, and they are still working at the same old job. But we have made headway in that the collard leaves, vinegar, fish meal, spider web, and other dressings named above are no longer used in good society.

There is no reason for chronic leg ulcers. All are curable if the job is rightly undertaken. School nurses have proved that a few applications of moist dressings to remove heavy scabs alternating with a little treatment of the cleaned sores cure the legs of school children. In adults the job is not so easy, but it can always be accomplished if properly done. Many are cured by the simpler methods used on the legs of children. Many are due to varicose veins. These are more difficult to cure. We have given methods of treatment which physicians of experience use successfully in varicose leg ulcers. In some, injection of the veins by modern methods is required. In some, the circulation is so poor that the legs must be kept horizontal for a while. In some cases the cause is syphilitic infection. In these, the diagnosis is made by blood tests and part of treatment is directed against the constitutional infection. All ulcers of the leg, not cancerous in nature, can be cured.

The main theme of the North Carolina report, as made by Dr. C. E. Ford, was the folly of trying all the cures which were offered and not of following the advice of Davy Crockett: "Be sure you are right—then go ahead."

LET DOCTOR DIRECT HIM.

V. Z. writes: My husband has heart trouble. The doctor gave him some medicine for it, but he says it hasn't helped. He has smothering spells around his heart. When he has a cold he has to sit up at night as he can't get his breath lying down. He is only 25 years old. Do you think his heart trouble can be cured?

REPLY.

Many people who have organic heart disease with broken compensation succeed in getting back on a good level of efficiency. Have your physician tell you just what the diagnosis is. "Heart trouble" may have any one of several meanings. Then have your doctor direct just how your husband should live, going into detail. Your husband must live just as he is told to do. Send ten cents and stamped, addressed envelope for our booklet on diseases of the heart. It should help you carry out your doctor's directions.

LOW BLOOD PRESSURE.

A. E. W. writes: Can anything be done to cure a too low blood pressure in a middle-aged woman by means of diet or any other mean?

REPLY.

The diet advised is one rich in meats, oils, sour milks, vegetables, and fruits, and poor in breads, pastries, cereals, sweets and desserts. Some wear abdominal supports with advantage. Taking interest in competitive sports is of service.

AUTOMATIC RENEWAL.

Chicago, June 12.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. I signed a lease on an apartment Oct. 1, 1927, to Oct. 1, 1928. The following year a lease was brought to me for year '28 to '29, but not signed. There is no clause in the lease to the effect that lease automatically renews itself. In May, 1929, the owner came to me and offered a reduction of $5 on rent. I have been occupying the same apartment since, having no lease.

2. Am I renting on a month to month basis?

3. I have been told that the reduction of rent broke the first lease. H. W. T.

1. Where a tenant under a lease for a definite term holds over beyond the term and the landlord accepts additional rent, these circumstances, in the absence of other circumstances showing a contrary intent on the part of the landlord, result in a renewal by implication so that neither party can terminate the tenancy nor increase the rent during such renewal.

2. No.

3. We would not agree, on the bare facts stated. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

RAT PARK TO GO.

Chicago, June 11.—[Friend of the People.]—Cannot something be done to remove an old barn in the rear of West North avenue? It is a dirty, rat infested, disease breeding fire hazard. C. L.

You are advised that the owner of the shed has been notified to wreck same, as our inspector reports it to be in an unsafe condition.

CHRISTIAN P. PASCHEN,
Commissioner of Buildings.

TRESPASSING.

Chicago, June 12.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I own a lot in another city and have just learned that a concrete driveway was put about six inches on my lot by a contractor, about 8 years ago. There is no garage and driveway extends half the length of the lot.

1. Does the Illinois law give that six inches of my land to the owner of the driveway, if it is allowed to remain there for a period of years? I am told it did, for the full length of the lot, in a court case a few years ago.

2. If so, after how many years?

3. What shall I do now to recover my property? Resurvey? E. M. R.

1. The neighbor would be likely to get at least an easement, so that he could maintain the driveway.

2. Twenty years.

3. If he will not pay you a reasonable price for the strip you should employ an attorney to force him off.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

IN WHICH WE INHERIT A GREAT FORTUNE.

Hooray! We're a Drake and we're going to get our slice of the fortune left by Sir Francis valued at seventy-five or a hundred millions of dollars. We received a letter yesterday which told us of our good luck. After sacking a lot of Spanish cities in South America and capturing a large number of Spanish ships loaded with ingots and pieces of eight, Sir Francis sailed up the western coast of North America, seeking a passage to the Atlantic ocean. He careened his ships along the coast of what is now Oregon, and while they were careening he buried his gold. It's buried yet, but the people who wrote, to us know where it's planted and they're going to dig it up and give us our share.

All we have to do to get our fortune is to send ten dollars to the company, as they have to rig out a ship and hire some deep sea divers, as the island on which Sir Francis planted the stuff unfortunately sunk, but all that has to be done to recover it is to anchor the ship over the spot and send down the divers with some spades and shovels and dig it up. It seems that Mr. Drake had a daughter Perriwinkle who ran away with one of our ancestors. Our ancestor was already unfortunately married, and so when Perriwinkle presented him with a son all he could do was to give her and the son the gate and go back to his own happy hearthstone in Yorkshire. But to Perriwinkle we are indebted for the many million dollars we are soon to receive. She was a nice girl, was Perriwinkle, but a little careless.

But, after all, we don't think we'll send the ten dollars that will bring us back several million. It's enough to know that Sir Francis Drake was our ancestor and that we can call John and Tracy (who own the hotel) cousins. Even if we got the coin Sir Francis planted what good would it do us? If we bought a newspaper and gave the boy an ingot or one of the pieces of eight, probably he wouldn't be able to change it.

And, suppose we gave a taxi driver a couple of ingots in payment for a ride. It might make him so cross he would drop the ingots on our toes. And we know Ray, the groceryman, would say, "Pieces of eight? Eight what?" And it would take too long to explain. No, we will not claim our fortune, but—oh, hello, Cousin Tracy, how is Cousin John? That's inheritance enough.

HERO FALLEN.

"Married yesterday. When will you come visit us? MAC."

(Telegram à moi today.)

Well, you dirty old son of sedition,
You went and broke under at last!
I sit with a pipe-bowl for lamplight
And think me of several years past.

Who was it that broke up the outfit
By taking a poke at the dope
We had for a top-kick at Tondrais?
(Like taking a punch at the pope!)

Who was it that copped the quart (cognac)
Which stood on the window sill, rear,
And after we'd drunk it, who told me
It belonged to the dam' brigadier?

Who borrowed the skipper's cord breeches
And side-car to go into Toul?
And who put the parrot in the officers' mess
Screeching, "Stand at attention, you fool!"

Who coached the ma'm'selle in the Crillon
To cause a commotion and wreck
Walking up to that artillery colonel
And throwing her arms 'round his neck?

Who crawled out to find Captain Parker,
When the Bois-le-Pretre shook as death cracked,
And got him back into a shell-hole
To wait till we counter-attacked?

Mon Dieu . . . I have not had the privilege
Of meeting her thus far, but, Mac,
Pray extend her my heartiest greetings;
I wish her the M. P.'s knack!

THE SOLICITOR.

THE TARIFF BILL will be signed in Washington today, but our butcher must have signed it last week; we got his bill yesterday.

WE WERE SO SURPRISED at one of our oldest and dearest friends yesterday. We were wandering down towards the loop at noon time and we encountered this dearest and oldest friend and we greeted him brightly, and as he is always telling us about the big killings he is continually making on the stock markets we innocently said: "Well, how are your stocks today?" And he glared at us savagely and with a face as black as a thundercloud he said, "Oh, you go to Indiana!" Not that he said Indiana; the place he named is some distance from there and much warmer. But this is a family Line paper and we would rather put down Indiana. Now, why did he get so angry when he asked him about his stocks? Maybe the market went down a little yesterday.

We Gather the Past Winter Was a Trifle Chilly in Labrador.

(The Trib Receives News from a Volunteer Correspondent.)

Mr. Editor. Sir: Would appreciate space in your valued paper in regard to the past winter on the Labrador coast. From October 15th last which have never been for many years known severe frost set in freezing up bays and harbors without any change from 10 to 26 below zero until March 14th when thaw began with a very heavy sea breaking up all ice and rains same time and still continues with every indication of early spring. Owing to such severe frost and gales navigation cut off from the Labrador coast and in the Straits of Belle Isle since November 29 although the S. S. Sagona made several attempts to cross the straits to the Canadian and Newfoundland Labrador met with failure, owing to heavy slob ice ship did not make more than half her route up the coast on Newfoundland side. Winter from October to March on the Labrador been the worse ever experienced for the past twenty years. B. B. S.

YES! We will have a last line today, and we will sign it. Anything is better than business uncertainty, and we are anxious to end all doubt. Under our new plan the last line will have a flexible provision, so that at any time we can make it the first line, or even the middle line, or upside down, and in red ink. Such revision can be accomplished without disturbing the rest of the column. R. H. L.

THE FOG THAT IS SETTLING OVER AMERICA

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

65 YEARS AGO TODAY

JUNE 17, 1865.

THE NEWS.—Gen. Halleck's letter in reply to the strictures of Gen. Sherman in the official report of the latter is published entire in another column. Gen. Halleck rests his case upon two points: First, that his acts and orders were those of Lieut. Gen. Grant, transmitted through him to the army under his command; second, that those acts and orders were justified by the laws of war, even if they had not been directed by superior authority. On both these points his argument seems conclusive. Gen. Halleck adds that Sherman's report, so far as it relates to himself, is unjust, unkind, and contrary to military usage, and his statements contrary to the real facts of the case.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Among the petitions received by the President asking special pardons are that of Robert E. Lee, late commander of the rebel forces, and that of Alex H. Stephens, late vice president of the late confederacy.

EDITORIAL.—We trust that the government will find means to suppress the outbreak of the rebellion in New York which has taken the form of a subscription of money to Gen. R. E. Lee. Our dispatches announce that it has already reached the sum of $90,000. In no other city would such an insult be offered to the spirit of northern loyalty.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The official list of the casualties in Gen. Grant's campaign, commencing with the crossing of the Rapidan in May, 1864, and ending with the surrender of Lee's army, has been received at the war department. The casualties foot up nearly 90,000.

30 YEARS AGO TODAY

JUNE 17, 1900.

PHILADELPHIA.—Senator Hanna will stay at the head of the Republican national committee during the next campaign at the special request of President McKinley. New York can have the nomination for the vice presidency if it will agree on Cornelius N. Bliss, Andrew D. White, or some one of that caliber. Otherwise Dolliver is likely to be nominated. Gov. Rocsevelt arrived here for the convention. He is as determined as ever not to be made Vice President against his will. Despite this there was a revival of talk of a stampede in his direction.

SHANGHAI.—An attack on the foreign legation by the Boxers, their repulse by the marine guards, the burning of foreign residences, American missions, customs, mess quarters and other structures, the massacre of native Christians, and the assassination of the German minister, Baron von Ketteler, are the reported developments in the critical situation at Peking. British troops, it is also reported, fought the troops of Gen. Jung Fuh Siang several hours and many Chinese were killed. The position of foreign ministers and their families in Peking is alarming in the extreme. Five foreign ministers are said to have asked safe conduct for themselves and their families from Peking and were refused by the empress dowager. Ten thousand Chinese soldiers are reported to have disbanded and joined the Boxers. Foreign property has also been destroyed by Boxer mobs in Tientsin.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY

JUNE 17, 1920.

NEW YORK.—Mrs. Marie Larsen, housekeeper for Joseph B. Elwell, wealthy turfman and whist expert, murdered last week in his home, confessed she had attempted to shield a young woman, whose name she disclosed, by taking a pink silk nightrobe, boudoir cap, and slippers from the room of Elwell and hiding them. John T. Dooling, assistant district attorney, refused to reveal the name of the young woman, but it is understood to have been mentioned previously in connection with the case.

CHICAGO.—Mrs. Maud Louise Moss, daughter of Col. Bion J. Arnold of Chicago, and wife of Capt. L. H. Moss, U. S. A., was shot in the back of the head and killed as she was driving with her husband, Col. William V. McCreight, and the latter's mother in the McCreight automobile near Camp Grant. It is not believed the shooting was intentional. Three soldiers are sought as suspects.

ST. LOUIS PAPERS PLEASE COPY.

Chicago, May 2.—Pretty soon we will hear the newsboys exclaiming: "A great heat wave in Chicago! Many people prostrated and some dead!" Well, this will not be limited to Chicago, but will prevail in a large part of the world.

We believe that Chicago will soon solve the excess heat problem. We have worked and studied on that problem, particularly as the matter relates to Chicago, and we see a dozen ways that this city could have a cool, temperate summer climate.

For instance, Chicago could place check valves over her storm sewers, open the water plugs and flood the streets with that good cold lake water which would cool the air. She could freeze the lake front and cool air would arise and flow over the city. In the event that a contrary wind took it elsewhere or there was no breeze, she could force the air over the city by powerful fans.

Chicago could circulate lines of pipes over the city close to the curbstones, or lines of pipes along the sidewalks, and run ice making chemicals through the pipes which would cool the air and partly filter it. She can cause an artificial draft by means of powerful fans which would cool the city. She can stretch across the streets cloth and saturate it with water which will cool the air and filter it.

She could create mountains of ice in winter and the cool breeze arising therefrom in summer would cool the city, besides the cool ice water that could flow through the streets would cool the city itself. Other systems we could mention. J. A. SHIRES.

UNEMPLOYMENT STATISTICS.

Chicago, May 13.—Did any one ever see a heading that was more misleading—"Four Per Cent of Chicago Residents Without Jobs"? If you figure that naturally one out of four residents, counting children and dependents, would be working, it would mean that at least 16 per cent of the working population is out of work. I cannot tell you what there is to be done, but I know that it is necessary that some concerted effort be made by the business men of the city to find employment, because we don't want charity, but I think I speak for the great majority of the unemployed when I say that we want work, we want an opportunity to earn our living, to pay our rent, and to view the future without dread.

ONE OF THE JOBLESS.

CONSULAR IMMUNITY.

Evanston, Ill., June 12.—Mr. Depasta, Greek consul general in Chicago, is protesting his arrest in Evanston for passing a stop sign. Just because he cannot be arrested for minor offenses is no reason why he should not obey our traffic laws and thereby jeopardize our safety, when we are either walking or driving. Why don't the people who are extended these courtesies respect them? EVANSTONIAN.

WHO ARE THE VIKINGS!

Chicago, June 11.—A few days ago my attention was directed to an article in THE TRIBUNE stating that City Treasurer Peterson was to address an organization called the "Viking association" at Gurnee, Ill. This organization is composed of Swedish people, yet they style themselves "Vikings." To my understanding, the Vikings were what ethnologists called the "Norseman," or "Northmen," to anglicize the term.

Today we say "Norge" when we mean "Norse," for such is the modern pronunciation of Norway.

History does not acknowledge a connection between the Swedes and those fierce mailed warriors of the Longboat, yet we have in Chicago many Swedish societies which, whether by accident or design, imply that Swedes are descended from these Norse heroes. It is significant that in all Sweden not one Viking ship has ever been brought to light while several have been unearthed in Norway, among them being the Gokstad, which turned out to be a treasure house of Norwegian history. Today we see the Norwegians celebrating Leif Eriksen day, for he is a Norwegian and not a Swede, as the Swedes would have us believe.

It seems to me unjust to the Norwegians of today for the Swedes to rise in and claim for themselves, because they are of Scandinavian origin, that which the Danes, who are also Scandinavian people, rightfully accord the Norwegians. MRS. H. HAWELA.

RADIO PRONUNCIATION.

Chicago, June 8.—Although present-day radio programs may have some faults, it seems to me that their influence for the improvement of the language of the masses must be powerful indeed. I know that I have learned a lot just from listening to the announcers. For instance, I used to think that the words "interesting," "program," "audience," "necessary," and "hundred" were pronounced, according to my middle western dialect, as "interesting," "program," "audience," "necessary," and "hundred." Now I have learned that these words should be pronounced "intrasting," "program," "audyens," "nessessree," and "hunderd."

A DELIGHT TO ALL BEHOLDERS.

Chicago, June 12.—Now that a monument to the Goddess of Chance has been erected on the summit of the Board of Trade building, it may be that Mr. Insull will be moved to erect a statue to the Goddess of Music on top of the new Civic Opera House building. If so, I would like to suggest that he utilize for this purpose the lady who now purports to represent the Goddess of Music, dedicated to Theodore Thomas, opposite Orchestra hall on Michigan avenue. Where now located, the figure is placed at a great disadvantage. Her matronly charms are not suited to close range observation, but on top of the opera house her fleshly beauties might be a delight to all beholders. A. C.

POLICE SMASH DETROIT KIDNAP RING; ARREST 8

Long List of Crimes Laid to Band.

Detroit, Mich., June 16.—[Special.]—In a sudden sortie against a gang of kidnapers which for two years has been squeezing money from well to do Detroiters the police tonight had arrested eight persons and were hunting several others.

Following are those arrested:

Harry Hallisey, operator of the Hazel club, a blind pig; Stanley De Long, Ferndale barber, and his wife, Fanny Rubenstien, Mrs. Grace Black, arrested at the home of the De Longs; Mrs. Doris O'Riordan, of Detroit, and James Riley of Elkhart, Ind., and a man named Marcus.

Information which led to the raid against the gang was obtained largely through confessions obtained by the state police from Henry R. Andrews and Joseph Lamon, now serving long prison terms for kidnaping.

Long List of Kidnapings.

Through the arrests the police hope to clear up a long list of kidnaping cases, including those of David Cass, whose body was found in a ditch in Upper county; Fred Begeman, wealthy Wyandotte bootlegger; Matthew Goldreith Jr., son of a restaurant proprietor; Max Plummer, Toledo hotel man; Sammy Gross, Hamtramck racketeer; his wife, May, and Robert Forster, young garage mechanic. They also believe the gang responsible for the slaying of William Gunn, well to do merchant, at the door of his home a year ago.

From first to last 17 persons were associated with the gang, according to the police. Of these, seven already are serving prison terms. One, "Jimmy" Walters, cabaret owner, was killed by gangsters.

Six Months of Police Work.

The arrests were the result of six months of investigation by the state and Detroit police in conjunction with James E. Chenot, prosecuting attorney, and Harold H. Emmons, former police commissioner.

Evidence gathered by the police and the prosecutor's office point to Halisey and De Long as the leaders of the gang.

A gang attempted to kidnap Sammy Mandel, the boxer, and his manager at their camp near Topinabee, Mich., a few months ago, but failed when the fighter was tipped off.

INTERESTING LETTERS

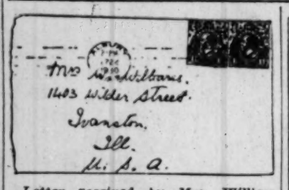
FROM ALBURY, NEW SOUTH WALES.



Letter received by Mrs. William Williams, 1403 Wilder street, Evanston, Ill.

This letter was sent to Mrs. Williams by her sister, who resides in Albury, New South Wales.

Albury is a town in Goulburn county, New South Wales. It is situated on the right bank of the Murray river near the border of Victoria, about 390 miles southwest of Sydney. Two bridges—one constructed of wood carrying a road and the other of iron and bearing a railroad—cross the Murray at this point.

The river is practicable for navigation from this town to its mouth, 1,800 miles distant. Albury is the center of an agricultural and sheep raising territory, and the wine produced there is famous throughout Australia. Grapes, tobacco and cereal are the principal products raised in the vicinity.

The tree under which the first explorers made camp at Albury in November, 1824, still stands in an inclosure in the town.

Concerning present conditions in Albury, Mrs. Williams' sister writes her that business is on the rise there and that their winter is just beginning. The people in that community are farmers and raise wheat and oats much as the farmers in our own middle west. It has been so dry for the last four months that they have not been able to plant their winter wheat.

Times have been so hard that for a while this last summer they made part of their living "poaching" fish and game to the city, as apparently there is a law against peddling in the cities. They obtain all of their water from the Murray, although they say many people are suffering from the long dry spell and have to haul water for long distances by train and tank wagon.

6 CHILDREN DIE IN EFFORT TO AID DROWNING GIRL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

AUGSBURG, Germany, June 16.—Six children in the village of Epfach sacrificed their lives heroically in vainly seeking to rescue a playmate from drowning. Ten children were paddling side by side in the flooded river Lech when a 9 year old girl was caught in an eddy and swept down stream. The other nine unhesitatingly joined hands, formed a chain and advanced into the river. All were carried off by the current. Their cries quickly attracted passersby, who succeeded in rescuing three of them. Only two bodies thus far have been recovered.

Scour Lake Shore for Body of Steamer's Passenger

The police of Benton Harbor, Mich., were searching the lake shore there yesterday for the body of a middle aged man reported to have leaped from the Goodrich steamer Saugatuck bound from Chicago to Benton Harbor last Saturday. In a corked bottle, washed ashore, the police found the following note: "You will find me in the lake." It was signed by Marian Braddon, Blue Springs, Mo.

RONGETTI FACES TRIAL TODAY ON MURDER CHARGE

Dr. Amante Rongetti, who was once under sentence of death for causing the death of Miss Loretta Enders, unwed mother and her babe, by the performance of an abortion, is to be placed on trial this morning before Judge Daniel P. Trude in the Criminal court with a similar offense, in the case of Mrs. Elizabeth Palumbo, 24 years old, Bellewood. Rongetti tried to obtain a long continuance when his case was called for trial yesterday, because his attorney, William Scott Stewart, said that two new defense witnesses had been found and that he should be given time to bring them to court.

Mrs. Palumbo died on May 21, 1929, after an operation performed by Dr. Rongetti, it is charged. The judge held that the physician has had plenty of time since then to obtain any necessary witnesses and allowed only a one day continuance.

Dr. Rongetti was saved from electrocution in the former case by a reversal of his original conviction by the Supreme court. On a retrial of the case he was found guilty of manslaughter, and their case is pending.

SHERMAN, ONCE DRY OF SENATE, BACKS VOTE TEST

Declares Volstead Law Is Failure.

Former Senator Lawrence Y. Sherman, formerly one of the outstanding prohibitionists in Illinois, yesterday declared himself as favoring the proposed prohibition referendum at the election next November. In conference with Chairman Snow of the Republican county central committee and County Treasurer Harding he pledged himself to take the stump in an effort to bring out a large vote and promised to abide by the decision.

Mr. Sherman suggested that the wet and dry vote campaign be carried downstate. He attributed the reign of lawlessness in Cook county to the Volstead act and declared that the situation is not peculiar to the county, holding that it is state wide. The former senator criticised the action of the Anti-Saloon league in ignoring the referendum as a disregard for the will of the people.

"Volstead Law Has Failed."

"The Volstead law has failed because it is too drastic," he declared. "It has encouraged a new field of crime, illicit liquor traffic, until now we are confronted with a general disregard for law. If safe blowing were suddenly to become as profitable as the liquor traffic the law enforcers would be as quickly confronted with gangs of safeblowers killing and corrupting as indiscriminately as liquor gangs.

"I am still in favor of prohibition. I believe that sane prohibition would be a benefit to the country, but I believe that the people should be given the opportunity to speak for themselves. I intend to campaign, not for prohibition, but to ask the voters of this state to express themselves, and I will pledge myself to abide by their decision.

Would Disregard Party Lines.

"If the people of the state want the 18th amendment repealed or the Volstead act killed I will abide by their expression. In the same fashion I will fight against the state search and seizure act. If the vote is in favor of the present rule I will bend every effort to support the movement.

"The referendum should be beyond party lines. In Washington the representatives of the Anti-Saloon league tell Republican and Democratic legislators that prohibition is not in politics, that both can support the law and still be members of either faction. In the same manner voters must disregard party lines in expressing their opinions."

Recall Volstead Act Vote.

Former Senator Sherman was elected to the state house of representatives in 1897 and served as speaker of the house from 1899 to 1903. He was lieutenant governor from 1904 to 1908. As United States senator he voted for the 18th amendment and the Volstead act, and was known as a strong supporter of the Anti-Saloon league.

Chairman Snow asked the support of every element in the county in securing 350,000 signatures to the petition for the referendum. He said that at the suggestion of former Senator Sherman petitions are to be distributed downstate.

"The stand of the former senator lends support to the movement," Mr. Snow said. "I, too, am concerned with the expression of public opinion. In the 6th ward, which is of mixed population, we received 12,000 signatures to the petition and only one person refused to sign."

DORAN WILL REMAIN IN TREASURY AS HEAD OF ALCOHOL BUREAU

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 16.—[Special.]—Dr. James M. Doran, retiring prohibition commissioner, disclosed today that he will remain in the treasury department as head of the bureau of industrial alcohol, created by the bill transferring the prohibition unit to the department of justice.

There had been some doubt, however, as to whether Doran would stay in the treasury or leave to accept a remunerative position with one of the larger users of industrial alcohol.

"You can say that I am going to remain in the treasury," Doran said today.

As commissioner of industrial alcohol Dr. Doran will have general supervision over the issuance of permits for the legal sale of industrial alcohol, a phase of government prohibition activity which utilizes the services of between 2,200 and 2,300 employés.

Officials here declined to discuss the situation at Chicago. One official said that both E. C. Yellowley, prohibition administrator at Chicago and Alexander Jamie, chief special prohibition agent virtually are certain to be retained on the prohibition pay roll after reorganization takes place.

WOMEN DRY LAW FOES CALL NORTH SHORE MEETING

Ralph Shaw Will Address Winnetka Rally.

BY KATHLEEN McLAUGHLIN.

Members of the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform will present their views against the eighteenth amendment to women of the north shore suburbs on Monday. An open meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Dudley Cates at 1190 Westmore road, Winnetka. The spokesman for the occasion will be Attorney Ralph Shaw of the law firm of Winston, Strawn & Shaw.

Mr. Shaw's discussion of prohibition legislation before the judiciary committee of the house of representatives at Washington in February attracted attention. At that time he labeled it "a monstrous law—the only one I know of where appropriations are deliberately permitted for the purpose of bribing people to violate it in order that the victims may be punished for its violation by the government which bribed them."

A number of Lake Forest matrons, who have allied themselves with the efforts of the organization, have promised to attend the gathering and to bring friends. Others will come from Evanston, Wilmette, Highland Park and other suburbs.

Mrs. Leslie Wheeler, one of the co-chairmen of the local group, which has headquarters at 700 North Michigan, declared yesterday that the mail and telephone inquiries concerning the aims and objects of the movement are growing steadily more numerous, with yesterday a record breaker.

EXPECT TO START NEXT MONTH ON NEW I. C. STATION

Work on the long delayed Randolph street viaduct and new Illinois Central suburban station, a $3,000,000 project, will start in thirty days, it was indicated yesterday. George E. Gorman, south park attorney, filed a petition in the Circuit court to fix the boundary lines and settle the riparian rights between the railroad and the park board.

Legal approval of the court has been the only bar to the project as the park board, the railroad, and the city have already reached an agreement on settlement terms. But it will be necessary to advertise the petition in a legal daily for thirty days to allow any objections to be filed. This will allow the decision to be handed down July 23, the second day of the July term. F. L. Thompson, vice president of the railroad, said work would be started as soon as the petition is signed.

says: "No one should be misled by the claims that any dentifrice will cure or aid the cure of any diseased condition of the mouth.

"Those who need dental treatment should consult a dentist and be guided by his advice.

"It is important that the teeth and gums be examined not less than twice a year.

"The sole function of a dentifrice is to thoroughly cleanse the teeth and gums—all other claims are misleading."

Colgate's—of all dentifrices—cleans teeth most thoroughly

25c

The price is important—but the quality—not the price—has held Colgate leadership for 30 years.

SCIENTIFIC and exacting laboratory tests have proved that the cleansing properties of no other dentifrice are equal to those of Colgate's. That is because sluggish, pasty dentifrices do not possess the penetrating powers of Colgate's active foam in cleansing tiny crevices and fissures.

This bubbling foam flushes particles of food from between the teeth, leaving these hidden surfaces healthfully and thoroughly clean.

Agreeing with Dr. Wynne's opinion are such eminent authorities as Dr. Hardee Chambliss, Dean of School of Sciences, Catholic University, Washington; Dr. H. H. Bunzell, Ph.D., University of Chicago, and many others of equally high standing who have been retained to render their expert opinions.

Be safe. Choose the dentifrice which has won the dental profession's unqualified approval. The dentifrice which, on dentists' advice, more people are using today than any other.

FOUR BIG GRAFT CASES AT ONCE IN GOTHAM COURTS

Ex-Judge Is Forced to Trial Despite Pleas.

BY TOM PETTEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 16.—[Special.]—The mills of the courts ground busily here today as justice began ticking off the alleged misdeeds of four men high in the political life of a city that counts its graft in the millions. A former county judge, a magistrate, a veterinary with a "cure all" for property problems, and the ex-head of the probation bureau either had their day in court or were advised of its approach.

Former County Judge W. Bernard Vause, who recently resigned under fire because of his activities in the $400,000 failure of the Columbia Financing corporations and the matter of $250,000 fees he is said to have received for obtaining pier space for big steamship lines, was advised he must go on trial tomorrow in federal court for perjury and grand larceny. Ex-Judge Vause has sought both the surgeon's knife and the asylum in his fight to delay trial.

Magistrate Also in Courts.

A record of the connection of Magistrate George F. Ewald with the Cotter Butte Mines, Inc., whose stock sales he is said to have encouraged among his legal friends, was prepared by United States Attorney Charles H. Tuttle for the appelate division of the state Supreme court.

Dr. William F. Doyle, the "horse doctor," who made a fortune representing clients before the board of standards and appeals, pleaded not guilty in federal court to indictments charging perjury and filing false income tax returns for the last three years. The trial will be held within ten days.

Edwin J. Cooley, indicted for alleged false auditing of pay rolls while he was head of the general sessions probation bureau, went on trial in the Supreme court. Cooley, among other things, is said to have carried his sister on his pay roll while she was collecting a salary as a teacher in Buffalo.

Vause Delay Moves Told.

At the hearing of argument in the Judge Vause case in federal court this morning Judge Alfred C. Coxe ruled the trial must begin tomorrow, no matter what physical and mental condition Vause might be in and regardless of whether he has trial counsel. Nathan D. Perlman, Vause's attorney, said neither he nor his associate would be able to act as trial counsel for the ex-judge. No explanation was offered.

Mr. Tuttle electrified the courtroom twice when he told of incidents that had occurred in the last few days of preparation for the Vause trial. Tuttle said an effort apparently had been made to bribe Dr. Edward E. Hicks, who, with Dr. Frank W. Robertson, examined Vause for the prosecution. Mr. Tuttle also charged that about a week ago Vause tried to have an operation for appendicitis performed upon himself, but was unsuccessful because the doctor to whom he applied refused to operate.

First Tried Insanity.

When Judge Vause found himself at the end of his political rope he resigned and declared himself "a sick man." For a few days he succeeded in delaying his trial. Dr. Frank Vause, the former judge's brother, and Dr. Thomas B. Cusack were the alienists who examined him at the instructions of his counsel. They told the court how he babbled incoherently of his "ruin" and of the "awful charges."

Dr. Edward Hicks and Dr. Robertson examined Vause for the prosecution.

"Is he insane?" asked Mr. Tuttle.

"He is not insane in the meaning of the law," said Dr. Hicks. "In plain words, I would say he is petrified with fear. He is perfectly able to stand trial and it will be the best thing for him to go to bat and get rid of his troubles."

Called "Mentally Sick."

Dr. Cusack had testified that much of Vause's speech was a repetition of "O, O, my God. I am ruined. My picture is in the rogue's gallery. O, my God." Mr. Tuttle asked Dr. Cusack if Vause was insane and received the answer that he was "mentally sick."

Through the mail fraud which resulted in the failure of the Columbia Finance corporation, for which Vause is being tried, Mr. Tuttle hopes to gain more information concerning the mysterious $250,000 said to have been paid Vause for obtaining pier leases. As there is no connection between the pier fees and the financing corporation failure, Mr. Tuttle may be balked in this line of attack.

PRIEST WHO MADE HIS OWN "BRANDY" DRAWS A $500 FINE

Schuyler, Neb., June 16.—(AP)—The Rev. Antone Folta, 45, pastor of Holy Trinity church at Heun, Neb., near here, today was fined $500 and given a suspended jail sentence of one year after he pleaded guilty to a charge of possessing a liquor still. The priest was paroled to his attorney, George Wertz, by District Judge F. L. Spear.

Father Folta was arrested by deputy state sheriffs last week after they located the still near his parish home.

In a statement after his arrest, the priest said he operated the still to have "brandy" for his friends and not for commercial purposes.

Woman to Oppose Norris for Senate Nomination

Lincoln, Neb., June 16.—(AP)—Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska will be opposed by a woman in the August primary for the Republican senatorial nomination. Mrs. Beatrice Fenton Craig, a school teacher, filed for the post today.

Others in the field are Lieut. Gov. George A. Williams, State Treasurer W. M. Stebbins, and Aaron C. Read of Madison.

Another woman, Dr. Jennie Mather Callfas of Omaha, was the first to file for the Democratic senatorial nomination. She is opposed by Fred Hall also of Omaha.

HUSBAND FOUND WITH THROAT CUT, WIFE STRANGLED

Rock Island, Ill., June 16.—[Special.]—Joseph Doyle, 53, was found dead in bed today, his throat cut with a razor. By his side was found the body of his wife, Merle, 37, strangled to death with a cord.

Murder and suicide is the police theory.

The couple quarreled last night, according to their son, Marvin, 10, who discovered the bodies today. He and his brother, James, 8, slept through the killing.

Motor in Comfort and Safety on Wider Roads

On narrow eighteen and twenty foot roads we have congestion, discomfort, and danger. Forty foot roads are needed in metropolitan areas. Grade separations at railroad crossings and at the intersections of highways are essential.

Wider roads will make your Sunday and holiday driving more pleasant. With the building of such roads you can revive the old Sunday jaunt. The city man can take his family out into the country; the motorist from the small town or country can drive to the cities. And driving with forty foot roads will be safe and comfortable.

The Chicago Motor Club has been campaigning for years in behalf of forty foot roads in congested areas. By 1933, we suggest, forty foot roads be built to such terminals as Freeport, Sterling, Mendota, Peoria, Springfield, Champaign and Urbana, Danville, and the state line on the north.

Your support of the club plan will assure its success. Add your support to that of the 100,000 members of the club. In addition to civic work in behalf of the entire motoring public, the club renders special services available to members. A few of these services are:

Free mechanical first aid and towing service at any hour of the day or night.

Travel service, which provides you with maps, logs and the most complete and up to the minute advice on road conditions.

Bail bond service, which guarantees your appearance in traffic violation cases, where a bond not in excess of $100 is demanded.

Accident prevention work, which seeks to cut accidents, especially among school children, by means of safety posters and by fostering school boy patrols.

Home district service, which attends to special conditions around your home, such as seeing to it that refuse is promptly removed.

Insurance service, which provides the following features: The valued form policy, which in the event of total loss, pays the face value of the policy. Accessories are covered without additional charge. Last year the "exchange" returned cash savings to subscribers amounting to $711,332.11. Automobile insurance sales amounted to $3,894,706.04.

These are a few of the many money-saving services. Write or call for further information. Sixty-four branches: 34 downstate; 30 in Cook County.

MILD, AROMATIC TOBACCOS, patiently aged, are the basis of Chesterfield's wholesome goodness. Chesterfield's blend and cross-blend retains and rounds out their appetizing spice and flavor.

TINKHAM TO TAKE CANNON QUIZ TO FLOOR OF HOUSE

Will Ask 11 Questions of Bishop in Speech.

Washington, D. C., June 16.—[Special.]—Bishop James Cannon Jr., southern Methodist dry leader, absolved by the senate lobby committee last week from answering questions on either his political or financial activities, will be challenged tomorrow by Representative G. H. Tinkham [Rep., Mass.] not only to tell the whole story of his stock market speculations through a New York bucket shop but to explain his reluctance to tell how he used funds entrusted to him during the 1928 presidential campaign.

Carefully Prepared.

The high point of a house speech tomorrow, Tinkham declared tonight, will be a series of eleven carefully prepared questions addressed to the Methodist prelate. The Massachusetts member said tonight that the question would cover Cannon's "flyers through the now defunct Kable & Co. in options down to the bishop's failure to report under the federal corrupt practices act all of the $65,300 contributed for his anti-Smith fight in 1928 by E. C. Jameson, New York insurance man."

Meanwhile Senator George W. Norris [Rep., Neb.], chairman of the senate judiciary committee, announced a postponement of his resolution calling on the department of justice to report what efforts had been made to secure clemency for Harry L. Holdhurst, operator of Kable & Co., now serving a five year term in the Atlanta penitentiary.

Inquire Into Delay of Trial.

Federal District Attorney Tuttle in New York has announced that no efforts have been made to secure a commutation of sentence for Goldhurst and that he would oppose such a move if made. Norris is now considering a resolution limited to an inquiry into the long delay in bringing Goldhurst to trial.

The bucketeer was indicted in April, 1928, after Kable & Co. was forced into bankruptcy for using the mails to defraud. Norris' resolution calls for files in the case, assigned for prosecution to Assistant District Attorney Etta Marye Fallor, an alumnus of Blackstone [Va.] college for girls, of which Cannon was formerly president.

Miss Sophie Trunwall, cashier for the American hospital, 850 Irving Park boulevard, was robbed of a $2,870 pay roll yesterday by three gunmen in front of 3339 North Marshfield avenue.

Miss Trunwall, who lives at 2108 Ainslie street, was returning from the Citizens' State bank, Melrose street and Lincoln avenue. She was in the rear seat of a hospital car driven by Clifton Hall, Negro chauffeur. The robbers crowded the machine to the curb and while one covered Hall the other snatched the satchel containing the currency from the seat beside Miss Turnwall. He said "Thank you" and bowed as he took it.

Eastern Frat Boy Totes Gun on Chicago Visit

John Geddes, 18 years old, of Rutherford, N. J., arrested by the police as a gangster suspect because he had a revolver on the front seat of his car, told Judge Francis Allegretti in Boys' court yesterday that he was a Princeton prep school student and was en route to Minneapolis to attend a fraternity convention. He was carrying the gun because he had heard so much about Chicago, he said. The judge let him go.

HUTCHISON SHOOTS PAR GOLF TO LEAD OPEN TRIALS

GEORGE SMITH, GALLETT SCORE 145 FOR SECOND

7 Earn Place in Tournament.

BY HOWARD BARRY.

Jock Hutchison of Glen View shot 72—70—142 to top the field of 171 golfers who competed yesterday at Interlachen in the Chicago district qualifying round of the national open. Fifteen other low scorers completed the quota which will represent this section in championship play at the Interlachen Country club, Minneapolis, July 10, 11, and 12. The highest score to qualify was 149.

Close behind Hutchison came George M. Smith of Onwentsia and F. D. Gallett of Milwaukee, each with 145. Others who made up the select seventeen were:

Harry Cooper, Chick Evans Jr., Willie Chamberlain, and Frank Walsh with 146; J. E. Noonan, J. P. Rouse, and H. E. Walter with 147; Don Armstrong, Irvin Ottmann, Alec Aylton, and James Foulis with 148; Gus Novotny, Bill Parker, and Richard Martin with 149.

Amateurs Rank High.

Of those who qualified, four are amateurs — Evans, Armstrong, Novotny, and Martin.

Simultaneously in 20 districts from coast to coast qualifying play was held which cut an entry list of 1,140 to 312. These together with 38 who are exempt from preliminaries will bring the championship field to 150.

On his morning round Smith shot four birdies and four pars to be out in 33, three strokes under par, for the lowest nine holes score of the day. He got home in 37 and in the afternoon took 38 and 37 to account for his total of 145.

To win highest honors Jock Hutchison played a remarkably consistent game, being in the rough only twice. His score of 142 was even par for 36 holes.

He began his morning round with two par 4's but three-putted the next hole for a 6. He made up for that lapse, however, with a remarkable 3 on the next. From tee to pin is 223 yards and his drive against the wind came to rest one foot from the cup. He sank the putt for a deuce.

Gets His Two.

He followed this with another birdie 3 by laying his mashie shot on the green and getting down in two putts for a 4. Jock played perfect golf on the next four holes and came to the turn in 35, one stroke under par. He maintained his stride to the twelfth hole which he three-putted, but he redeemed himself on the next with a birdie 4. He moved along flawlessly to the 18th where he encountered the most serious trouble of the round. His second shot found a bunker and he took two strokes to get out. A couple of putts brought his score for the hole to 6 and for the round to 72, two above par.

The first three holes of the afternoon round were negotiated without mishap but he had to get a par 3 on the fourth. His drive landed in a trap at the edge of the green but he chipped to within a foot of the hole and sank his putt. He followed this with a birdie 4. The sixth was made in par and on the 433 yard seventh, his mashie shot rimmed the cup. He got down in one putt for a birdie 3.

On the eighth his tee shot came to rest at the edge of the green and he took three putts. He made par on the ninth to reach the turn in 35.

The tenth was negotiated without trouble and on the eleventh he sank a 8 foot putt for a birdie 2.

Three Putts Twelfth.

Three putts gave him a 5 on the twelfth but he got back to perfect golf on the next three. On the sixteenth he holed a four footer for a birdie 3.

Jock displayed some canny golf for a par on the 17th after a double mishap. He hooked his tee shot into a tree and his second stroke with a number 3 iron trickled over the green into a trap. An explosion shot brought him back and he sank a 15 footer. He was one above par on the final hole due to three putts.

HOYLAKE, England, June 16.—Both the professional and amateur records on the Hoylake course were equaled today in the first qualifying round of the British open golf championship. Leo Diegel and Archie Compston led the pros with 70's while Bobby Jones turned in 73 as the standing mark among the amateurs. Par on the Hoylake course is 72.

The first 18 holes in the two days of qualifying play produced a field of more than 100 shooting in the seventies.

The field was split in half today, part playing here and the others at Wallasey, a few miles away. The latter is a shorter course with a par of 70. The lowest score of the day, a 68, was turned in there by William Twine, British pro. George Von Elm finished with 71.

Reverse Courses Today.

The two fields will reverse courses tomorrow and then the first 100 will enter the championship play Wednesday in a 36 hole test which will eliminate all but 60. These will then shoot another 36 holes Friday for the title.

The best of the American entries turned in cards which will assure them places among the select 100 Wednesday. Von Elm's expert work on the greens gave him 32 on his second nine holes at Wallasey to make his 71. Don Moe, Oregon collegian, took 75 over the same course, as did Horton Smith.

Douglas Grant, a tournament veteran, turned in 76, and Jim Barnes, Cornish bred American professional, matched MacDonald Smith with 77.

There were several others in the upper tiers, among them Norman Newton, who played around with Jones and took 82 after shooting too often into the tall grass. Tommy Armour and Gene Sarazen failed to appear and were scratched.

Twine Leads Field.

The best score of the 275 golfers was made at Wallasey by Twine, former champion of Kent county and winner of many British competitions. He was never in trouble and used his putter to hold his card af a level which was two strokes better than any other during the day.

Cyril Tolley, former British amateur champion, took 72. Abe Mitchell, who has beaten Diegel two out of three matches in England this year, equaled the 73 of Bobby Jones at Hoylake. Donald Soulby had the same card, and so did Henry Cotton, one of the best British pros, and Percy Allis, former open champion.

None of the veteran tournament players went far from par. The records of 301 for the Hoylake course of 72 holes, which is held by Walter Hagen, is liable to change hands this year. Hagen is not defending the title after winning it last year for the fourth time.

Diegel's round was accomplished in

LENARD'S RIGHT STOPS LEONE IN OPENING ROUND

Henry Lenard, Chicago featherweight, knocked out Tony Leone of Cleveland, in the first round of a 10 round final engagement at Shrewsbridge stadium last night. Lenard caught Leone with a right to the chin after two minutes of action and sent him down for the count. In the semi-final Billy Tompkins, Milwaukee lightweight, won by a technical knockout over Billy Defoe of Canada, in the seventh round of an eight-rounder.

Boy, Called Out at Plate, K. O.'s Umpire with Bat

Kenosha, Wis., June 16.—[Special.]—"Kill the umpire!" some one shouted when Edward Murauski, 41, called Joe Germinaro, 16, out at the plate in a sandlot game today. Germinaro picked up the baseball bat and hit Murauski on the head, knocking him out. Other boys carried the unconscious umpire to his home, and he was later taken to the Kenosha hospital. Physicians said he may have a fractured skull.

Cubs Score 5 in Ninth to Defeat Giants, 8 to 5

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 16.—Defeat hung ominously over the Cubs for eight innings today, but in a twinkling of an eye they changed everything in the ninth. With a final round barrage that laid the Giants back against the ropes, the champions drove one man to the plate with the tying tally. With the bases still loaded, Capt. Charley Grimm stepped into the hero rôle with a homer, and the time honored New York enemies passed out by an 8 to 5 score.

For the final tomorrow Guy Bush of the Cubs will pitch against Bill Walker.

Until the ninth it looked as if Charley Root, despite brilliant pitching, would have to bear the penalty of letting his foes shoot homers into the nearby seats. In the first three innings they assailed him with four, all with the bases vacant. That was all he yielded until he quit at the end of the eighth, but the four round trippers seemed sufficient for the Giants' purposes in view of the ease with which the champs fell before Carl Lefty Hubbell. They hit the southpaw at the start and then subsided. But they came back with a flourish, and that's what makes the story.

Load Bases in Eighth.

The real thrills began in the eighth, when the Cubs gave their first indication of carrying through the day's task. After being helpless for five innings, they loaded the bases with none out in the eighth. Only two runs were needed for a tie, but the rally subsided with only one of the two needed tallies across the plate. The other which would have created a 4 to 4 deadlock was cut down by a throw to the plate.

Opening the ninth, Dan Taylor was given a bat and told to use it in Root's place. The rookie responded with a single to center. Blair came up and swung vainly at two terrible pitches, but suddenly changed his tactics. He waited for the good ball that Hubbell wouldn't give him. The result was a pass.

English then bunted safely down the third base line, and the sacks were filled. Then as quickly as it started the eleventh hour revolt began to die. Cuyler sailed a fly to center, and it was too short to permit a man to go home from third. Next was Wilson, and he could do nothing better than a pop to Critz.

Then Stephenson stepped into the

In the WAKE of the NEWS

BOXING AS SPORT.

ON the afternoon following the Schmeling-Sharkey fight in New York The Wake encountered Chairman John Clinnin and Fred Gardner of the Illinois Boxing commission. Naturally our conversation concerned pugilism. Finally we remarked, "What I can't understand is why you business men are willing to go through all the grief of being commissioners with plenty of criticism, seldom any praise, and having to deal with so many tricksters, men whom you wouldn't trust if they were engaged in any other enterprise."

"It's a public duty," replied Chairman Clinnin. "Some one has to do it. When we were appointed Gov. Emmerson told us that if we couldn't keep boxing clean he would ask the legislature to repeal the law. One seldom receives other than criticism in any public service. I know that from other offices I have held. We're trying to save boxing."

"Is it worth saving?" we ventured.

The chairman paused, looked sober, and replied with deliberation: "That's just what I sometimes wonder myself. But I think it is. The public apparently wants it. If boxing were not governed the managers would run wild. It's not the boxers, it's the managers, who cause most of the trouble."

"Well, what do you consider the commission's duty?" we asked.

"First, to protect the public," replied Gen. Clinnin. "Then the promoters, then the boxers. Our purpose is to have the sport conducted with whatever dignity possible and a minimum of objectionable features. There's something primitive in most of us which causes us to enjoy a good glove contest. You may agree or not that boxing is worth saving, but people, men and women both, attend, so evidently they enjoy it."

"Why do you put promoters before boxers in the matter of protection?" we asked.

"Well, perhaps I should have rated them tied for second," laughed the chairman! "Promoters usually have greater financial stability. We wish to protect all, but especially the public. We make mistakes. We try not to repeat the same mistakes. If this commission, of which Mr. Getz also is a member, feels it cannot accomplish its mission or at least better conditions we'll hand our resignations to Gov. Emmerson. We take our duties seriously, even if you do think it's a thankless job."

Reveille Boy.

It is unfortunate Reveille Boy, American Derby winner at 55 to 1, was not nominated for the Arlington Classic. While his previous efforts did not suggest such a notable victory, the way in which he was going away from Gallant Knight at the finish after that brush for supremacy in the stretch made it appear he might give Gallant Fox a tussle. At this time no other 3 year old seems likely to do so.

"Little Old Lady."

Pugilist Jack Sharkey was born in Binghamton, N. Y., only a few miles from Endicott, where Max Schmeling pitched his training camp, and really part of the same shoe manufacturing community. While at Endicott a New York sports writer received telegraphic orders from his newspaper to write a "human interest" story on Sharkey's parents. There was not time to visit their home and file the story, so he painted a word picture of the cottage and the "frail little old lady sitting in a rocking chair on the porch of their comfortable but not pretentious abode." Imagine his horror the next day when he saw Jack's mother and noted that her notch on the scales would be around the 200 pound mark.

BUSINESS PICKS UP AT STADIUM TICKET OFFICE

14,000 Seats Sold for Stribling Bout.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Will Otto Von Porat's long range punches defeat Young Stribling tomorrow night? Or will Stribling, boring in close, bring over that short right smash which has won scores of battles, to measure the tall Norwegian?

These were topics of discussion yesterday as the fighters finished their workouts. Stribling's drill was more intensive because of his vacation last week when he saw the Schmeling-Sharkey fight in New York. Otto, who remained here and continued his gymnasium program, concluded his drill with a lighter schedule. Both are in condition.

Stribling weighed 191½ pounds yesterday. Von Porat scaled 205. They are expected to enter the ring at these weights.

Advance Sale $50,000.

The advance sale yesterday was $50,000 with 14,000 tickets purchased. Three thousand tickets, a record, were sold from 9 o'clock yesterday morning until mid-afternoon. If the Stadium is sold out, and officials predict it will be, 21,000 will pay to see the heavyweights. The gross receipts will be $94,000. Stribling's contract calls for 25 per cent, while Von Porat will receive 30 per cent.

Fans list Stribling's advantages as follows:

Experience. The southerner has engaged in nearly 300 professional bouts. He has met Jack Sharkey, Tommy Loughran and other top notchers, not to mention two fights with the Italian giant, Primo Carnera. No fighter ever has knocked him out.

Otto Weighs More.

Ability to make his opponents fight as he wishes. He attacks best from in close, a style calculated to bother Von Porat. His best punch is an over hand right which travels only a short distance.

Von Porat has these advantages, the fans say:

Superior weight and a superior punch. With 13 pounds advantage, Otto also possesses the stamina to withstand Stribling's wrestling tactics. Von Porat's punch needs no mention. He's rated with the best of the heavyweights in this respect and if he lands, Stribling will need all his experience to weather the round.

Nate Lewis, Stadium matchmaker, has the assurance of Vittoria Campolo he'll fight the winner in Chicago June 30 if he can get in condition by that time. Vittorio is under contract to Madison Square Garden, but he considers the contract void since he has not been given an opportunity to fight.

Pa Stribling Is Boss.

Neither Von Porat nor Stribling is under contract to the Stadium after tomorrow night. Pa Stribling, his son's manager, however, has assured the officials his son is willing to meet a suitable opponent here if he wins from Von Porat.

On the supporting card tomorrow night Hein Mueller will test Armando De Carlos, Italian heavyweight, in his American debut. They are scheduled to box ten rounds. Mike Mauer, Stribling's sparring mate, meets Fred Caldori of Philadelphia in a six round preliminary.

Edgar Norman fights eight rounds with Ted Ross. The opening four round bout brings together Earl Folke of Janesville and Andy Shanks of Grand Rapids. They are heavyweights.

SOX GET LEFT HANDED HURLER AND CATCHER

Deal Made on Eve of Trade Limit.

Grimes for Sherdel

BOSTON, June 16.—(AP)—The Boston Braves today exchanged Burleigh Grimes, veteran National league pitcher, for "Wee Willie" Sherdel and Fred Frankhouse of the St. Louis Cardinals pitching staff.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The Great Shires is leaving Chicago flat. The White Sox have traded C. Arthur to the Washington Senators for Garland Braxton, a left handed pitcher, and Bennett Tate, a good catcher. Chicago loses a colorful artist, and Nick Altrock, Washington's boop-a-doop personality boy, gets a new playmate.

Sox officials announced the trade last night, a few hours before the midnight deadline for spring swaps. The Sox folks said the trade was not inspired by a desire to get rid of Shires, but purely a move to get an experienced, successful left handed pitcher and an aggressive catcher who can be counted upon to do some hitting.

Clark Griffith, president of the Senators, said in Washington that Shires would not supplant Capt. Joe Judge as the first string first baseman. But there's no getting around the fact that Judge, who is past 36, isn't as frisky as he used to be, whereas Shires is not quite 23, so he swears.

Colorful Diamond Figure.

In many ways Shires has been one of the most spectacular figures ever connected with a Chicago baseball team. Although he recently has been in semi-eclipse, his passing to another organization will be regretted by many Chicago fans, and especially by the authors who have the bleak assignment of writing something about the White Sox when the team isn't winning.

Shires came to the Sox in time to play 33 games at the close of the 1928 season. He broke into the lineup in Boston on his arrival from Waco and got a triple and three singles in his first major league game. He finished the season with a mark of .341.

C. Arthur came north from Texas with the idea that the way to get in the big money was to get a lot of publicity. He decided upon what he privately called the "ego racket."

"Chewingest" Ball Player.

His first step was to chew larger chews of tobacco than ever had been chewed before in the history of baseball. He was helped in this plan by the dean of umpires, Tommy Connolly, who described Arthur as the "chewingest player I've seen in forty years of baseball."

But Shires knew that the tobacco act wasn't of sufficient scope to continue unaided through an entire pennant drive, so he spent the winter of 1928-'29 thinking up new stuff.

Whatever his plans, the spring training season last year gave him a lot of publicity that he hadn't planned. Though a rookie, he was made captain of the team and his feigned ego became genuine.

Then one day he went up to the plate in batting practice wearing a red bonnet. Blackburne said the monkeyshine was an insult to the sacred dignity of baseball and suspended Art again. And after the game Shires engaged in his first fisticuffs with Blackburne, giving Lena the first of two black eyes.

Punches Lena, Witness.

Shortly afterward Shires was reinstated and he and Lena were rooming together.

One night in Philadelphia some time later the Sox manager broke into Arthur's room just as he was sipping some ginger ale. Lena brought along a witness, Secretary Lou Barbour. Shires licked the two of them and was suspended for the remainder of the year.

If you read newspapers your memory probably is fresh as to what has happened since—how Shires entered the prize ring and packed the hall on every appearance; how he turned down $50,000 in bookings when Commissioner Landis ruled no player could remain a player and be a prize fighter in his spare time; how he held out for a $25,000 salary with the Sox and eventually wound up by signing near the close of the training season for $7,000 and a bonus clause.

Changed Man This Season.

But after he had signed at the bargain rates C. Arthur was a changed man.

Braxton this season has been used mostly for relief work. He was in one of the games here, stopping a rally against Hadley, and he appeared in all three of the games in St. Louis, including the encounter yesterday. He has won three games and lost one, a creditable showing, though it does not reflect the usefulness of a relief worker. Lyons and McKain are the only pitchers on the Sox who have won three games or more.

Since Braxton broke in with the Yankees in 1926, he has won more games than he's lost each season. He joined Washington the next year. Last season his record showed 12 victories and ten defeats.

Tate has been with Washington since 1924 and in that time had a batting average of .292. He caught 91 games in 1929.

EVEN TED LYONS CAN'T KEEP SOX FROM LOSING

Boston Makes It Two in a Row, 6 to 3.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Ted Lyons yesterday was the principal reason that Ted Lyons didn't win his tenth victory of the season. A shower in the seventh inning soaked the supply of baseballs. Soaked baseballs are very trying to knuckle ball experts such as Ted, so, you might say, soaked baseballs, poor baseball and the tallend Boston Red Sox licked the White Sox by a score of 6 to 3.

It is indeed fortunate that we have some fancy alibi, like soaked baseballs, that can be blamed for the defeat, for otherwise it would be a disgraceful thing—losing the fourth straight this season to the miserable Red Sox. And to make it more depressing, the defeat was administered by Jack Russell, who, on the last issuance of the American league's official statistics, was the losingest pitcher in the league.

Scores as Cissell Holds Ball.

The White Sox seem to be getting more inept each day. Aside from the incident of the soaked baseballs, about which we will tell you presently, there was another spectacle of the sort that are aging Manager Donie Bush before his time. You wouldn't think it possible that a man could run from second to home while the second baseman of a major league club was standing in short right field inspecting the seams on the baseball. Yet this is exactly what happened yesterday, Rhyne being the base runner and Bill Cissell the seam inspector.

There is no evidence that things will be better when Walsh opposes Gaston in the final today.

Pinch Hitter Fans.

Now, something more about the soaked baseball alibi. In the fourth inning the White Sox had tied the score at 2 to 2 by getting a run around without the aid of a base hit. The score still was 2 to 2 and hopes ran high that the Comiskeys might win a ball game when the bases were filled in the sixth. But the chance died when Pinch Batter Barnes proved himself already in the White Sox stride by striking out to retire the side.

Thus the first of the seventh arrived. Kamm threw out Webb, but Narlesky singled to center and drops of water began falling fast. Rhyne walked and some new balls were taken out of the umpire's ball box [don't overlook this, Dear Reader, for it's important to the plot].

Then Narlesky and Rhyne moved up on the first of Lyons' wild pitches. Somehow Lyons got hold of a baseball that was not out of the umpire's box and made Berry tap to him, after which Narlesky was run down, Lyons to Crouse to Kamm to Lyons. Then they got some more soaked baseballs and Lyons walked Russell, filling the bases.

Wild Pitch Scores Run.

Well, the next thing that happened was a wild pitch that went at least 15 feet over Crouse's head, Rhyne scoring. At this point everybody rushed out and discovered that the baseballs in the umpire's box had been soaked. So a dry baseball was obtained from Mr. Comiskey's vault and Oliver knocked it for a double, scoring Berry and Russell. That made the score Boston 5, Chicago 2.

The Red Sox made a run in the ninth on the aforementioned seam inspection by Cissell and would have acquired another but for the great arm of Smead Jolley, who threw out Russell at the plate.

The White Sox put over a run and had the bases full in the ninth when Reynolds popped to Sweeney to end the game. In this session Shires and Metzler smashed White Sox pinch batting tradition by getting hits—Shires registering a single and Metzler a double.

SENATORS HALT BROWNS' WINNING STREAK, 9 TO 7

St. Louis, Mo., June 16.—(AP)—Uncorking a heavy scoring attack in the last three innings, the Washington Senators defeated the Browns today, 9 to 7. The defeat stopped a four game winning streak for the Browns and dropped them from fifth to sixth place in the standings. Neither starting pitcher was able to weather the storm of base hits. Brown, who relieved Hadley, was given credit for the win and Kimsey was charged with the defeat. Score:

On the 16th hole, the longest on th course, 532 yards, the Agua Calien pro took an eagle 3. His spoon sh fell 10 feet from the cup and Dieg was down easily two shots short par. He took a birdie on the 18 with a 30 foot putt.

Diegel played his tee shots with h brassie throughout the 18 holes.

He was bunkered on the first and took five, but reached level fours on the long third with a birdie 3. He was out in 36. He took four on the 10th, then a birdie 3 on the short 11th.

At the 12th his pitch shot sank on the far side of a trap guarding the green, from where he tried to blast it out from a hanging lie, but the ball fell back and he took 6 holing out. He was then playing fours but went one over on the long 16th with a par five and finished with 37 for his 73.

Von Elm was putting poorly his first nine and had a string of 5s which took him to the turn with 39. He sank one 50 foot putt on the way in, however, and made up on the green what he had lost before and more.

pinch spot he has occupied on more than one occasion. Twice in the previous innings he had delivered singles. He did that a third time. He smashed a ball toward second. Critz batted it down, but couldn't recover so Stevie got a hit. Taylor went over the plate with the tying run and the bags still were fully populated.

The rest was simple but effective. Grimm looked over a couple of wide ones and then took a couple of swings. He swung again, the ball lined into the lower right field tier, a parade of four runners trampled over the plate and the Giants were down to stay.

Both factions came into possession of one run in the first inning. English started the Cub tally by singling to right. Wilson shoved him home with a two bagger that went hopping down the third base line. Stephenson walked, Grimm rolled to Terry for the third out. The Giants retrieved the tally in their half when, with two out, Terry pumped Root's first pitch into the nearby grandstand in left field.

Jackson Hits Homer.

The Cubs could manufacture only one run from three hits in the second. Hartnett opened with a single, making his seventh consecutive safety. He was nailed going to second on a hit and run play which didn't work. Beck fouled out, but Root rolled a single between short and third. Blair sent him scooting around to the plate on a triple to right center.

In the Giant second Root retired one man before complications loomed. Jackson stepped into the first pitch and lined it into the left field seats just a bit inside the white marker, which is only 270 feet from the plate. On the next pitch Allen hoisted a fly ball into the upper tier in left. This put the Giants in front, 3 to 2. Leach dropped a homer into the right field seats to start the third and that made it 4 to 2.

The run in the eighth on which the Cubs crept toward a tie score began when Wilson walked. Stephenson sent a short single to left. Grimm bunted and beat it for a hit when the Giant infield got scrambled up on making the play. This filled the bases with none out. Hartnett crashed a long fly to center, Wilson scoring and Stephenson racing to third after the catch. Tolson was summoned to bat for Beck and flied to left. Stephenson tried to dash home with the tying run, but was nailed on Leach's throw.

Phelps Stops Cards; Robins Win, 5 to 3

Brooklyn, N. Y., June 16.—(AP)—Behind the steady pitching of Ray Phelps, the league leading Brooklyn Robins defeated the St. Louis Cardinals, 5 to 3, today. Phelps lost a shut out victory in the final inning when High's line single through the box injured the lanky Robin pitcher's hand and the Cards went on to score three runs.

Babe Herman led Brooklyn's 12 hit attack with a double and two singles in four trips to the plate, driving in three runs. Score:

Porcupine Leads North Woods Pests

BY BOB BECKER.

The north woods camper who goes into the lake and woods country for his first trip invariably forgets that there is a common nuisance roving the woods which may do him dirt. This is the porcupine. It's a stupid beast, almost devoid of fear, and is a pestiferous camp marauder. Campers should keep these facts in mind because the porky can visit a camp left for the day and do no end of damage before the tenters return at night.

On trips which we have made into the north country we rarely arrange our duffel at night without giving a thought to a possible visit from a porky or a skunk. Many times we have been awakened by a marauding porcupine which, fortunately, is so clumsy and without guile that he blunders around and easily wakes one up.

Another possible camp visitor, especially if you live in a cabin, is the weasel. This forest inhabitant is inquisitive, quite friendly and entertaining.

Campers should remember that the clumsy porcupine has an insistent craving for salt and will gnaw anything that has the least saline touch to it. If perspiring hands have touched an axe handle, a canoe paddle, an oar, or the stock of a gun, the porky will apply his molars to these objects and, if undisturbed, he'll ruin them.

He also is fond of leather, shoes, belts, saddles, gloves or other objects are fair game for him. In camp it is a good idea to hang up your bacon, ham, butter, or other salty foodstuffs if you plan on leaving your base and going away for a few days. By suspending these groceries from wires you can foil the attacks of the porky.

It is sort of an unwritten law of the woods that the porcupines should not be molested, but campers who have to put up with the animals for any length of time sometimes feel justified in waging war against them.

Outsiders Disturb Sleepy After-Derby Crowd.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Ripfield, a son of Master Charlie-Hightleaf, won the third race at odds of 50 to 1 at Washington Park yesterday and disturbed the peace of an otherwise quiet after-derby-afternoon. Even when old Van Winkle got up after that long sleep there wasn't as much excitement as when Ripfield raced to his victory.

Ripfield sported the silks of Charles W. Bidwill, secretary of the Illinois turf association. He was ridden by jockey Bob Finnerty, another sleepy sort of a guy. The crowd, with Rebellion Boy's exciting victory off its chest, also was a bit sleepy.

But when Ripfield and Jockey Finnerty finished their slumber so did the 4,000 racegoers and even though only a few had wagered on Rip he was accorded a reception in the winners' circle that was worthy of a champion.

Twelve Face Barrier.

Twelve plater sprinters went to the post in the six furlong dash. Scotland was the favorite and Tommy Lad spiritedly backed. Most of the others along with Ripfield were entirely overlooked.

But old Rip apparently had heard the alarm clock at the starting gate. He jumped into the lead after they had gone a furlong and never gave it up, but had to show a lot of heart to withstand the late challenge of Jessie Carey and win by a nose. Medley, which had chased Ripfield most of the way, was third.

Rip ran the six furlongs in 1:14, a very slow time, and in the $2 mutuels paid $103.22 to win, $49.96 to place, and $26.86 to show. Jessie Carey grouped in the field paid $16.54 and $9.36. Medley was $11.08 to show.

The Illinois Athletic club purse, also at six furlongs, was the feature and it was won by the LeMar Stock Farm's Morsel. But so many long shot players were cheering for Ripfield they almost overlooked this little black son of Vulcain-Sweet Bun, which had been a star on Chicago tracks as a 2 year old last season.

Morsel Wins Feature.

Last year Morsel was a front runner, and showed a tendency to quit in the stretch. But when matched up with such notables as Justinian from the Greentree stable, Crofton from the far west, famous old Flat Iron, Double Heart, and others, he showed a different kind of a performance.

Flimsy Takes Aqueduct Race from Capture

New York, June 16.—[Special.]—Harry Payne Whitney's silks again were carried to victory when his Flimsy was first in the Miss Woodford handicap, best offering on the card at Aqueduct today. Flimsy ran coupled with Murky Cloud, but the pair was second choice in the betting at 9 to 5, the public favor going to Mrs. George Carroll's Okaybee. Okaybee ran third, Capture from the Rancocas stable making a great race in the stretch to run within a length of Flimsy at the wire.

Flimsy had a five pound weight concession over Okaybee, which carried 123 pounds. Flimsy ran step for step with Okaybee down the back stretch and around the bend when the two settled down to run it out in the stretch. Flimsy proved herself easily the better of Okaybee. Capture's rush made the race interesting for a moment, but Workman kept his mount going to the wire.

ARLINGTON PARK TO SEE GALLANT FOX JULY 19

Gallant Fox, the 3 year old champion, may start his drive for the all-age turf championship in Chicago it was indicated yesterday when officials at Arlington Park received the entry of the Kentucky Derby winner for the Arlington cup to be decided here on July 19.

He was nominated some time ago for the Arlington classic to be run July 12, and if he wins that race he no doubt will be sent against such older rivals as Misstep, Sun Beau, Diavolo, Petee Wrack, and others in the cup a week later. The cup is a weight for age race at a mile and a quarter. Gallant Fox and other 3 year olds will pack 114 pounds.

Fashions Best Bet at Ascot; Horses 2d Choice

ASCOT, England, June 16.—(AP)—Frocks and furbelows threatened to eclipse the racing at tomorrow's opening of the season's most fashionable racing meet in England.

Ascot has always been London's greatest fashion show, but this year is particularly interesting because of 1930's right-about-face in the matter of fashion. Long skirts, ruffles, and the picture hats of the war, and even Edwardian days, will hold the scene. Mere horse flesh will be overshadowed by lace hats and chiffons.

Preparation of an Ascot frock is almost as much of a ritual as the preparation of court gowns.

AT DEEP-ROCK STATIONS

Drive with KANT-NOCK-ETHYL and forget that old carbon "bogey." All gasolines form more or less carbon, and ordinary gasolines permit the carbon to rob your engine of power. But KANT-NOCK-ETHYL makes carbon deposits increase your power!

That's why you get such amazing pick-up, such a strong pull on heavy roads, such speed on the straight-away . . . that's why you have less gear-shifting with KANT-NOCK-ETHYL. It "knocks out that knock"... completely!

Ask any Deep-Rock service salesman to show you why these specifications are important... why KANT-NOCK-ETHYL tends to reduce upkeep expense.

And ask him about Certified Deep-Rock Prize Motor Oil . . . the only oil that comes sealed in a steel drum, registered by number, guaranteed as pure as the day it left the Deep-Rock refinery. Have him show you why the 100% pure parrafine base crude from which it is refined, makes Certified Deep-Rock Prize Motor Oil a truly better lubricant for your motor.

OIL HEAT depends on the OIL . . . depends on having the correct oil for your burner and having it delivered promptly. Contract now for next winter. Phone: Randolph 5600.

BREAK CLIMAXES FALLING CHICAGO STOCK PRICES

Mo-Kan Pipe Line Is Off 15¼ Points.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Climaxing a two weeks' decline, stocks on the Chicago exchange broke to new low levels yesterday under the weight of heavy selling. Net losses for the day ranged from one to ten points and in the case of the higher priced shares as high as twenty points. Transactions were the heaviest in weeks, amounting to 567,000 shares, not including 108,000 shares of Cities Service rights which were dealt in.

The largest loss among the lower priced issues was sustained by Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line which finished the day off 15¼ points. Trading in the issue was temporarily suspended while the specialist's books were being balanced following the withdrawal of supporting bids. The stock opened a fraction below its previous price as a block of 25,000 shares changed hands at 36¼. The block of stock is reported to have been taken by Frank P. Parish & Co., sponsors of the issue.

Parish Comments.

When trading in the stock was resumed shortly before the close a single trade of 20,000 shares was made at 21. In the meantime the issue had touched a low of 15 on the New York Curb following the news of the suspension of trading here.

Reached by telephone in New York Frank P. Parish, president of the company, said that the market in the stock had been supported as long as could be reasonably expected and that "the panicky sellers would be losers in the long run." The company's stock has held up stubbornly near its year's high during the last two weeks while the rest of the market was declining.

The company recently announced an ambitious program for the construction of a natural gas pipe line from the Texas field to points in Illinois and Indiana. Before the opening of the market yesterday the company had issued a statement saying that 5,000 men are at work on the project, which is to cost $40,000,000.

Other utility stocks which have showed a steadier tone during the recent declines than other issues were also hard hit in the crash yesterday. Middle West Utilities on sales approaching 90,000 shares, sold off to 26⅜, a net loss of 3⅝. On a considerably smaller turnover Cities Service lost 2¼. Among the higher priced shares Public Service no par crashed 19¼ and Commonwealth Edison fell nearly 14.

Other Losers.

Majestic Household, Grigsby-Grunow, and Insull Utility were other active issues to suffer substantial losses. Majestic was off 3⅜ points at the close while Grigsby lost around 3. Trading in Insull was the most active in weeks and the issue was down an even four points at the close.

Auburn on light sales tumbled to 115, a new low for the year, while other motor and accessory shares sustained losses ranging from one to five points. Bendix lost 5 and losses of two points or more were chalked up for Borg-Warner, Houdaille "B," and Foote Gear.

Miscellaneous specialties, including Merchants and Manufacturers, Electric Household, Castle, and Libby-McNeill, were pushed back from two to four points. Others to share in the general decline were National Standard, Lynch Glass, and Corporation Securities.

BLAME TARIFF AS STOCKS DROP BILLION IN DAY

7,445,420 Shares Are Tossed on Market.

lite $11.50, United Aircraft more than $11, Worthington Pump $11.50, Houston Oil $15.12½, and American Tobacco $10 a share. Drops of $7 to $10 a share were numerous in every section of the list.

There was little sign of the much-discussed bankers' support, supposed to have been quietly organized in behalf of the market last week, and the few rallies got afoot by professional operators were short lived and of no real benefit.

The sweeping character of the drive and the ease with which it gained momentum caused considerable alarm in the brokerage houses and many of them, not satisfied with the routine calling for more margin, were sending out invitations to some of the larger customers tonight to appear in person in the morning for a council of war.

Optimists Disconcerted.

Until today the street has chosen to believe that the market decline, which has been under way for more than a week now, was the work of professional manipulators out to force a break such as that of last October-November. "Bear raids" has been the popular term for the bulk of the selling. But today the street became genuinely convinced that the situation was much more serious than this and some rather grave speculation regarding the immediate course of future events was heard in the gloomy cloakroom gossip.

As usual when the market is going to the bad, all sorts of disquieting rumors were afloat. One of them had it that orders had been issued to bar newspaper reporters from the stock exchange. The only basis for this proved to be some changes in the regulations of the exchange's publicity department, which has just moved into new quarters. There were reports that this house and that was in difficulty.

Much was made of the break in commodity prices and of continued poor showings in the earnings of big corporations throughout the country. Wall street's spirits were low, and there was a disposition to magnify any morsel of bad news, no matter how seemingly inconsequential.

Little discrimination was shown in the selling movement. Utility stocks were hammered heavily. Losses among them ranged as high as $20 a share. American and Foreign Power was put on the block in enormous lots and lost nearly $8. Electric Power and Light was beaten down $11.50 a share. American Water Works, Brooklyn Union Gas—in fact, the whole group, came in for a trimming.

Oil stocks had their troubles, one and all, in spite of continued talk of cuts in production and probable increase in prices on account of seasonal demands, and the chemicals were all hard hit.

Even the motors, which have long been lurking in the background, were brought to the fore and put through their paces. Losses of $2 and $3 a share were the rule throughout the group.

Curb List Hard Hit.

The selling extended to the curb market and to bank shares and numerous new 1930 lows were registered on both these marts. Nearly all the popular issues on the curb were under fire and virtually the whole list was forced to the lowest level since last November.

The decline received added impetus when the suspension of trading in Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line in Chicago was announced. The issue broke 61¾ points here to 23⅛. Electric Bond and Share sold at 80½, off 8⅛; Lone Star Gas, 38⅝, off 5⅞; Gulf Oil, 129⅝, off 5⅝.

Although the banks called some $30,000,000 during the day, money was in good supply and the rates were easy, holding at 2½ per cent on call funds.

FARM PRICES CRASH

BY PAUL POTTER.

Agricultural commodity prices went tobogganing throughout the United States yesterday, grain, cotton and provisions selling at the lowest prices, in many instances, since before the war. The crash failed to cause the usual excited selling stampedes in Chicago grain pits. Observers said the downward swing had no direct relationship to lowered stock market prices during the day.

July wheat prices, reflecting values on the crop just starting to be harvested, dropped nearly 4 cents during the day, on the sixth consecutive day of lower quotations, to 95⅝ cents, the lowest since 1914. Corn was nearly three cents lower, selling at 74⅛c at the close, the lowest since 1926.

July oats sales were at prices the lowest, with two exceptions, since 1913, while rye tumbled to its lowest figure in thirty years. Cotton was the lowest, with the exception of 1926, since 1921, while lard and other provisions were carried downward in sympathy.

Silent on Price Level.

While farm prices in all other markets in the nation were making similar drops to that in Chicago, Chairman Alexander Legge of the federal farm board, together with S. R. McKelvie, wheat representative on the board, were meeting with directors of the Farmers' National Grain corporation. The meeting was said to be purely internal business routine, and no comment would be made by Mr. Legge on the day's events.

Mr. McKelvie, who meets with the directors again today, stated that the farm board had no announcement to make regarding its position as to price levels to be expected on the new crop, except that the farm board stood ready to prevent abnormally low grain prices.

OPINIONS VARY ON DURATION OF PRESENT SLUMP

Bankers Say It Will Take Time.

BY O. A. MATHER.

How long will the present depression in business and industry last? One may get about as many and varied opinions as times the question is asked of men of affairs and students of economics. Some predict speedy improvement, others see betterment a few months hence. Others speak of a turn next year.

"Our present situation is aggravated by world conditions that may make recovery rather slow and difficult," said Melvin A. Traylor, president of the First National bank. "Trade is dull and industry depressed almost throughout Europe, and this fact has its repercussion on our own trade and industry. It will require some time to remedy these conditions. In the meantime, it is foolish to be wholly pessimistic and foolhardy to be unreasonably optimistic."

Arthur Reynolds, chairman of the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust company, also believes it will take some time for readjustment.

Reynolds' Comment.

"We have been through depressions before and some were much more severe than at present," he reminded. "Some men tell me business is very bad and others say it is fairly good. As a general thing, I would say it is barely fair. We are becalmed just now and the only thing to do is to ride it out. No one can tell when a breeze may spring up, but the general disposition is not to expect recovery quite as soon as was hoped for a few months ago."

On the other hand, two well known economists yesterday predicted a turn for the better in the near future. One of them is Franklyn Hobbs, director of research of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, who spoke at the convention of the National Association of Purchasing Agents in Chicago.

"Approach Crossroads."

"We approach the crossroads," he said. "Probably within a month, and surely during the coming quarter, business activity will have passed the line established on the same date in 1929. Last year we were up and we went down; this year we were down and we are going up. We know what happened each month during 1929. We can, in reason, expect the business for a certain month not far ahead of us to match the business of that same month in 1929.

"And then we should go on up during the closing weeks of the year, entering 1931 on practically the level at which we entered 1929. Make sure that you do not collide with business which you are not prepared to handle when you reach that crossroad next month or soon after. Be sure you have materials on hand or on firm order to enable you to carry on."

Col. Leonard P. Ayres, vice president of the Cleveland Trust company, says that industrial activity has increased this month, although improvement has been mostly seasonal, and that business is better than it was during the low months of last December and March.

History Indicates—

"All the history of past periods of slow business indicates that the end of this one is approaching," he says. "The rapid decline from last July to December and the irregular sideways movement since then, which is marking the course of the bottom of the depression, constitutes about as long a floor as there has been in any depression in this country during this century. The upturn cannot be far away."

However, employment in Illinois between April 15 and May 15 was more slack than during any corresponding period since 1924, according to the Illinois department of labor. The index declined 1.4 per cent from the preceding month. Outdoor occupations that usually take the slack out of the labor market were subnormal for the season.

Cut Retail Gasoline Price in San Francisco District

New York, June 16.—(AP)—Following the action of the Texas company, the major oil companies in San Francisco have reduced the retail price of gasoline in the Pacific coast territory three cents a gallon, lowering the price in San Francisco bay cities to 17 cents from 20 cents.

Shippers Distrust Rail Consolidation: Sorrell

BY SCRUTATOR.

Present plans looking to the consolidation of the country's railroads into a limited number of systems are viewed by Chicago shippers with distrust, according to Prof. Lewis C. Sorrell of the University of Chicago's school of transportation, who addressed the Traffic club of Chicago at a luncheon in the Palmer house yesterday.

Prof. Sorrell, although stating he was not taking the position that these shippers are certainly right, either from the standpoint of their own welfare or from that of public interest generally, recommended that they continue to view with concern the possibilities in the consolidation scheme tentatively offered by the interstate commerce commission.

Cites Opposition.

Opposition to consolidation was due, he explained, to lack of agreement on four points. First, in the lack of definite proof shippers are reluctant to believe that they will benefit by lessening of competition in service and rates. Second, they do not want to lose such control as they have over the routing of freight. Third, they question the effect of policies made by railroads with terminals on the Atlantic, and fourth, they fear ill effects from the unification of terminals here. The last point is a necessary part of the consolidation plans.

Chicago, the speaker added, has not been so alert in opposing the officially outlined consolidations as some sections of the country have been. There have been no threats that this city is to be made a way station, with plenty of consolidated systems trying to get into it, and the shippers have not felt inclined to protest as have the people in the northwest, who oppose the combination of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific.

Prof. Sorrell especially stressed the shippers' views on railroad policies in market competition, and their fear of a change in the terminal situation. As an example of market competition he showed that merchants in Chicago and those in New York are striving to get business in Atlanta. Because freight rates enter, the competition is really between Chicago merchants plus their railroads to Atlanta on the one hand and New York merchants with their railroads to the same point on the other.

Might Sacrifice Interests.

"If carriers now operating in conjunction with those south of the Ohio," he said, "should become integral parts of trunk lines whose interests focus at the north Atlantic ports, interests of shippers in Chicago might be sacrificed in favor of eastern cities like Baltimore or Philadelphia."

Chicago's disadvantages in shipping to the Pacific coast cannot be equalized by raising Panama tolls, it was added, and shippers feel that their best hope to regain lost ground is to link up an all water route to the Pacific, which the Atlantic seaboard now has, and to keep rail routes to the south free of eastern domination.

GRIGSBY-GRUNOW WAS ASKED TO QUIT RADIO ASSOC., SAYS ITS HEAD

Springfield, Mass., June 16.—(AP)—Morris Metcalf of this city, president of the Radio Manufacturers' association, today issued the following statement in reply to one given out yesterday by B. J. Grigsby, chairman of the board of the Grigsby-Grunow company, in announcing that his company has resigned from membership in the manufacturers' association:

"A statement by the chairman of the board of the Grigsby-Grunow company has appeared, assigning as reasons for its resignation from the R. M. A. the failure of the R. M. A. to take an active stand on issues of vital interest to members of the industry.

"I wish to state emphatically that the actions of R. M. A. are not determined by any member or group of members, but by a majority vote of the membership or of its board of directors, and that the resignation of Grigsby-Grunow company was requested by the unanimous vote of those directors present at the regular meeting of the board held at Atlantic City, N. J., June 6.

"The reason for such request has nothing to do with the patent situation, or, in fact, any phase of the radio business situation as it now exists. The reasons leading up to the request for the resignation of the Grigsby-Grunow company are generally known in the trade, and it is a matter of surprise to me that that company should wish to refer to the matter in any way."

BANK SHARES SINK TO NEW LOW LEVELS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 16.—Prices of shares of virtually every important bank and trust company in the city sank today to new low levels for the year to date in trading on the over the counter market. The decline, it was said, had nothing to do with the banking situation, but was a part of the general downward plunge of securities prices in all markets.

The extent of the reactions varied from one or two points to as much as $500 a share in the case of one high priced issue and affected most severely the shares of the more prominent institutions. The largest decline was that experienced by the shares of the First National bank which fell from a bid price last Saturday of $5,300 a share to a closing bid of $4,800.

Vote Increase in Stock of Amer. Machine & Fdry.

New York, June 16.—(AP)—Stockholders of American Machine and Foundry company have approved an increase in the authorized common to 1,500,000 shares from 300,000. Five shares of new stock are to be issued for each of the old. The outstanding 7 per cent preferred will be retired at 115.

SEE TREASURY SURPLUS AT END OF FISCAL YEAR

Washington, D. C., June 16.—(AP)—Cash payments by thirteen foreign nations on account of their funded indebtedness to the United States today added $117,141,598 to the government's funds and made certain that President Hoover would complete his first full fiscal year in office with a comfortable surplus in the treasury.

Generally the foreign nations have made their payments to this country in United States securities which automatically reduced the public debt. The cash payments, however, while going to increase the surplus, in the long run attain the same decrease in the public debt, as it is an established treasury practice under Secretary Mellon to apply the surplus in revenue each year to debt reduction.

This amount with five hundred million dollars or more being received by the treasury today as the second payment of tax on 1929 incomes, will send the government's total revenue for the year to more than four billion dollars. Already there had been received on June 13 a total of $3,470,000,000, but on that date expenditures had amounted to $3,712,000,000, leaving a deficit of $242,000,000.

The income tax payments will send the total of such revenue for the year ending June 30 to approximately $2,450,000,000. On last Friday $1,928,156,338 had been collected from this source since last July 1.

The amount was $113,000,000 more than collected from income tax in the same period of the preceding year, while the total revenue for the year was $105,000,000 greater than collected in the same period of the 1929 fiscal year. Expenditures for the present year also showed an increase amounting to $182,000,000 more than for the same time a year ago.

Peabody Coal Reports Year's Net of $1,190,438

The annual report of the Peabody Coal company, issued yesterday by Samuel Insull, chairman of the board, shows net income for the fiscal year ended April 30, of $1,190,438. Surplus on April 30 stood at $1,170,078. During the year $248,540 was added to surplus out of earnings after payment of $941,898 in preferred dividends.

CURB STOCKS SUFFER WORST DECLINE SINCE CRASH LAST AUTUMN

New York, June 16.—(AP)—The curb market experienced its most drastic decline since the autumn selling panic today. Curb stocks were dumped overboard right and left to protect big board margins, and powerful bear attacks aggravated the situation in spots. Sales aggregated 1,788,100 shares.

A feature was Misouri-Kansas Pipe Line, which collapsed from the year's high of 36¼ to a new low at 15, and closed at 21½, off 14¾ points.

Such popular issues as Electric Bond and Share and Cities Service plunged to new low levels for the year, along with the majority of the more active issues. Electric Bond and Share dropped more than 10 points to 78, the year's lowest, compared to a November bottom of 50. Cities Service dropped nearly 4 points to a 1930 low of 25½, compared to a low last fall of 20.

Utilities bore the brunt of the selling, but oils, industrials and investment trusts were also under continuous pressure. American and Foreign Power warrants, American Light and Traction, United Gas, Lone Star Gas, and United Light A were among issues losing about 5 to 9 points. In the oils, Cosden and Gulf each dropped 5 points to new lows.

C. & O. PETITIONS TO SPLIT STOCK ON 4 FOR 1 BASIS

Washington, D. C., June 16.—(AP)—Formal application was made to the interstate commerce commission today by the Chesapeake & Ohio railroad for permission to split up its outstanding common stock issue on the basis of issuing four shares for one now in existence.

The step was authorized last fall by the corporation, which is the central unit of the Van Sweringen group, by reason of their control at the hands of O. P. and M. J. Van Sweringen of Cleveland, and associates. It represents one of the first occasions on which a major railroad has resorted to a practice of altering capital structure which has become rather general in industrial corporation management.

The Chesapeake & Ohio will have, if the split up is approved, nearly 8,000,000 shares of outstanding common stock.

I. C. C. Opens Hearing on Lake Cargo Freight Rates

Washington, D. C., June 16.—(AP)—For the fifth time in the last seven years the interstate commerce commission today again began taking evidence on the adjustment of lake cargo freight rates—the most controversial single rate issue arising out of American transportation operations.

Representatives of Pennsylvania and Ohio coal producers, who asked that their rates to Lake Erie ports be set at more than 35 cents below West Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee rates to the same destination, were heard first.

At the same time a long list of interventions in behalf of other interests were permitted as the hearings opened. Included in the number so joining in the litigation were the Anthracite institute, all eastern railroads serving great lakes ports, and civic and business organizations of communities in the northwest, as well as the state of Minnesota and shipping and dock operators on the lakes.

Oppose Any Change.

Opposing any change in the present level of rates were the attorneys for coal operators of the group of southern coal producing fields.

A. B. McElvany, a traffic expert for Pennsylvania coal operators, sketched the lake cargo trade as having risen to represent a total of 37,000,000 tons of bituminous coal a year, moving by rail to Lake Erie ports and thence in boats over the lakes to consumption in the northwest.

He pictured the southern fields as having in recent years continuously increased their proportion of the traffic—by reason largely of rate advantages he contended—until West Virginia alone last year supplied 17,000,000 tons of the total.

Character of Traffic.

Among the points cited by the witness was the character of traffic through the Lake Erie ports. The more western of these, such as Sandusky and Toledo, where the southern shipments are to a considerable degree concentrated, have little returning iron ore traffic coming down the lake, while the more eastern ports, the resort of the Ohio and Pennsylvania coal, have a larger proportion of iron ore unloading from the lake.

This balancing of traffic described, he treated as one of several points entitling the northern mines to a better rate adjustment than that now permitted them.

GRAIN VALUES DOWN TO NEAR PRE-WAR LEVEL

July Wheat Sells Off to 95⅝c.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Demoralized buying power yesterday sent grain values tumbling downward and to all intents and purposes prices are now back to around the pre-war level.

July wheat sold off nearly 4c to 95⅝c, the lowest that future has been since 1914, while July corn was down 2¾c to 74¼c, the lowest since 1926, with July oats 1c lower at 35⅛c, and the lowest with two exceptions since 1913, while rye dropped 1⅞c to 48⅝c, the lowest since 1900.

There was an utter absence of the dramatic in the decline in grains during the day, and an outsider unable to see the quotations on the blackboard would have thought nothing unusual was happening.

Long wheat came into the pit steadily from start to finish, and while there was heavy short covering at times rallies were feeble until near the close when many of the pit shorts started to even up and caused an upturn of around 1c from the inside with the close at net losses of 2⅞@3⅜c, July being 96¼c to 96½c, and September 98⅞@99c.

The break in the stock and cotton market tended to keep traders on the bear side, while reports of export demand and of excessive rains in parts of Oklahoma were ignored.

Economic Conditions Factor.

Unfavorable economic conditions the world over are largely responsible for the decline, according to the trade and official comment, and the passage of the new tariff bill has tended to accentuate the feeling of bearishness which prevails.

Wheat prices have been on the downgrade for six straight days, dropping 11⅜@12⅞c from the finish on June 10 with scarcely a rally on the way down. Winnipeg July has dropped 16c during the same period and closed 4⅛@4⅜c lower for the day, with July selling as low as 98⅛c, or 1½c below the price which was advanced to farmers for No. 1 northern at Fort William by the Canadian pool earlier in the season.

Outside wheat markets were weaker than Chicago with Kansas City off 3¼@3¾c, with July 88½c in that market, indicating a price of around 75c or below to farmers for No. 2 hard winter at country loading stations in that state. Reports that durum wheat had been sold for shipment as far ahead as December had little effect at Duluth when durum futures were off 3¼@3½c with July 84½c at the last.

July and September wheat in all American markets dropped about $1 during the day, and there was no evidence of government buying on the way down. Export sales of around 2,000,000 bu hard winter, durum and Manitobas were reported in all positions, but were ignored by the trade. Liverpool closed weak and 2¾@3¼d lower while Buenos Aires was 2½@3c lower with July in the latter market closing at $1 or 3½c over Chicago. Further rains were reported in the Canadian northwest, with the forecast for fair and warmer.

July Corn Acts Tight.

July corn acted tight a good part of the day due mainly to short covering, and at the last it was ¼c over the September. It is claimed that spreaders have been short July corn against purchases of other grains. The finish was 2⅛@2¼c lower with July, 74⅜@74¾c, and September, 74⅛@74¼c. In the last week prices have dropped 7⅞@8¾c, without improving the cash demand.

Lack of aggressive support was apparent in oats and the July went to 1c under September against ¾c on Saturday, with the finish ⅝@⅞c lower, July being 35½@35¾c and September, 36⅝c.

Buying by shorts and spreaders furnished the bulk of the support to rye, although there was evidence of a little better milling demand. The close was 1¼@2¾c lower with July, 49c, and September, 53¾c.

Top yesterday, $12.75; average $11.50.

Estimated receipts at Chicago today, 5,000 cattle, 28,000 hogs, and 10,000 sheep.

Demand in the hog market lately has centered on light and underweights, which scored slight gains yesterday in spite of the weakness noted in other weights. Top sales were the highest since last Monday, the peak at $10.40 comparing with a top of $10.15 Thursday.

Medium and weighty hogs comprised a larger proportion of offerings and the price range showed a tendency to widen further. The general average was unchanged at $9.95, making the spread between the top and average 45c. This is as wide as the range has been since early in April. Heavy hogs finished 5@10c lower, packing grades showing most weakness.

Hog Futures Are Uneven.

Although trading in hog futures continued active yesterday, prices were more uneven. Light weights ruled weak to 10c lower, while medium sold steady to 10c higher.

Five carloads of September light weights at the opening sold at $10.20. The close for similar contracts was $10.15. September mediums opened at $10.25 and closed at $10.20. June lights were offered as low as $10.20, and July offers at the close were down to $10.35.

A 25 per cent decrease in receipts failed to halt the break in cattle prices yesterday in view of reports that coolers are loaded down with surplus beef. Prices were hammered to new low levels for the last three years. Many buyers seemed unwilling to take on steers at the full reduction.

Choice 1,099@1,558 lb steers and yearlings topped the market for load lots at $12.75. Two steers averaging 1,250 lbs sold at $13.00. Bulk sold at $9.50@11.00, against $10.25@11.50 a week earlier. Cows and heifers ruled weak to 25c lower.

Calves were barely steady. Stockers and feeders were hard to dispose of at the recent sharp decline.

Lambs Score Comeback.

Lambs scored a substantial comeback on short receipts yesterday. Gains of 25@50c were recorded, with sorting lighter on the upgrade. Hundreds of good natives sold at $12.25@12.50, with 508 Idaho range lambs to a city butcher at $12.75, and 245 to packers at $12.60.

Receipts at Chicago for today are estimated at 5,000 cattle, 28,000 hogs and 10,000 sheep, against 6,153 cattle, 25,838 hogs, and 7,320 sheep on the previous Tuesday, and 6,817 cattle, 18,049 hogs, and 4,823 sheep a year ago.

COTTON PRICES DROP

The lowest prices in three years featured the cotton market yesterday. Liquidation of speculative accounts, coupled with pressure from shorts, were important factors. The break in grains and stocks also had its influence. Trading was heavy and prices declined irregularly.

The big trading was in New York, where futures opened 15 to 25 points lower and continued to decline irregularly, with July dropping 68 points at the extreme and the price getting down close to the 13c level. Spot cotton was off 50 points or $2.50 a bale to $13.45. Other futures in that market dropped 39 to 46 points, net at the close, which was at the lowest of the day. New Orleans July broke 64 points to $12.95, with the close at 13c. Spots were off 60 points, or $3.00 a bale to 12.65c, while new crop months lost 40 to 43 points. In Chicago, losses were 45 to 78 points. Prices follow:

SYNOPSIS.

Catherine West of Boston, on her way to Paris, meets Geoffrey Macadam in the Havre train. Catherine tells him that she is going to visit her cousin's widow, Mme. Albert Bender. She is apprehensive about the coming visit, because she had received, before sailing, a letter from Hermione Cushing, who tells her that Mme. Bender is not well. Macadam is a lawyer and he tells Catherine that his firm handles Mme. Bender's affairs. He had heard that she was ill. Arrived in Paris, Catherine is disappointed when her cousin's chauffeur is not at the station to meet her. Geoffrey sees her to her hotel. He tells her that he will be anxious to know how things are at the Bender apartment and she promises to call him. Arrived at Mme. Bender's apartment, she is received coldly by the servants. Jeanne, Mme. Bender's maid, tells her that Mme. Bender had attempted to commit suicide the night before. The next morning Catherine goes in to see Mme. Germaine, who is pathetically glad to see her. She tells Catherine how she had taken poison by mistake.

Geoffrey invites Catherine to dine with him and she tells him of her vague fears. He is disturbed, too.

The next morning Catherine calls on Miss Cushing, who takes her to her milliner, Mme. Baron, and she has noticed hanging around the Bender apartment. Back in the apartment she finds the gallery open for the first time and she goes in only to discover a number of pictures and tapestries missing. She asks Jeanne about them and the maid says they were sold shortly before Mr. Bender's death. Catherine feels she is lying and thinks she and Eduardo are thieves. She finds Jeanne is exerting a baneful influence on Mme. Bender.

Geoffrey again takes Catherine out to dinner and she unburdens herself to him. He already put an investigator on the case. He asks her to marry him, but she wants to be certain of her feelings. Catherine goes to visit Geoffrey's sister at Fontainebleau.

Geoffrey discovers Blom, the mysterious person seen around the Bender apartment, is being a possible heir to the Bender fortune. Shortly after this discovery Blom's employment to Mme. Baron, Miss Cushing's milliner, a widow, whose maiden name is the same of Mme. Bender, is announced.

A fire breaks out in Mme. Bender's apartment early in the morning and she is saved to death. Most of the building is saved. Catherine had returned suddenly to Paris the night before. The servants deny to Geoffrey that she came to the apartment. Geoffrey follows Eduardo, the butler, to Blom's office. He sends for his investigator to watch the pair, then calls his father and together they call on the commissariat de police, who assigns Inspector Bazin to hear their case. Geoffrey returns to see if the servants have meanwhile heard from Catherine.

Catherine did go to Mme. Bender's apartment on her return from Fontainebleau. It was after midnight and entering the side door, she reached her room without encountering any of the servants. Shortly after, smelling smoke, she investigates and finds it coming from her cousin's room. The door is locked. She dashes to get the keys and arouses Jeanne, who fights with her to prevent her from opening madam's door.

INSTALLMENT LXVIII.

EBBING CONSCIOUSNESS.

The door was driven back upon the seething holocaust, and Catherine was pushed aside by an impact so violent as to knock the breath from her body. Through the choking atmosphere a voice was saying:

"Too late. . . . You are insane to go in there, mademoiselle. Do you wish to be burned alive?"

Then and only then did the truth rush upon her. The locked doors, the deliberation of Jeanne's speech.

Like a maniac she cast herself upon her assailant who, with set face and shoulders squared, had braced herself against the closed door. Her heart was stifled her, she shrieked in a voice that was not her own the horrible suspicion now hardened into belief.

"Murderess—murderess! It is you who set fire to that room, you who caused this! You have killed her, locked her in so she couldn't escape! Open the door, or I will strangle you, beast that you are!"

Out of the saturnine face the dark eyes bored into hers with an expression of venomous hatred. Slowly a dark smile twisted the corners of the mouth.

Even in the anguish of the moment the girl noticed an attitude of expectancy, as though the woman were watching for something to occur.

It all took place within a few seconds. She suddenly became aware of a pounding noise, like that of a heavy knocker hammering upon a door. Then behind her a board creaked, and instinctively she turned her head.

There, only a pace removed, stood the butler, his swarthy features livid, his arm drawn back to disclose his yellowish teeth. His right arm was uplifted, there was a glinting object in his right hand, probably a heavy candlestick. For a second he poised above her, and she knew from his transfixed gaze that he, too, was listening to that persistent clamor.

That was all she saw. The same instant a crashing blow fell upon her skull and she crumpled to the floor.

Even then she made one final supreme effort to raise herself, groped in a world suddenly grown black. Across her mental vision shot points of dazzling silver, like meteors threading a midnight sky. A roaring as of the sea filled her ears, then that too subsided, and consciousness ebbed away.

. . . . . .

No words can convey Geoffrey's agony of mind on receiving the butler's cool denial. In that moment every shred of delusion was swept away, leaving him face to face with a stark reality nothing could cloak or soften. Catherine was gone.

As on a former occasion, a savage impulse seized him to drive his fingers into Eduardo's thick neck and throttle him. His desire must have showed in his face, for with a watchful look the man retreated a step. Noting the movement, Geoffrey took an iron grip on himself, recalling the part he had to play.

"Evidently," he remarked in even tones, "you did not take in what I said to you this morning. The fact is, Miss West left Fontainebleau last night at 11:45, meaning to return here. Since that time she has not been seen."

What might have passed for a glimmer of interest showed in the small wary eyes.

"Well, I am sure I don't know what to say about it. We did not see her, I can promise you that. I daresay she must have changed her mind."

"In any case," continued Geoffrey, "I have thought best to report the matter to the commissariat, and they are sending a man here presently to look into the matter. He will want to take a formal statement from you and Jeanne, in order to make certain she did not come home. Also the apartment has got to be searched."

"Quite so," replied the butler, imperturbably. "Jeanne has been put to bed. She's come over a bit queer after all this, but I daresay she is well enough to answer questions."

He turned to walk away, but Geoffrey stopped him with a peremptory gesture.

"That is not all. You and Jeanne will naturally be required to give evidence at the inquest. Until that is over I wish you both to remain here, occupying the uninjured rooms. Your wages will be paid, and you will assist with the inventory and removal of Mme. Bender's effects. As soon as things are in order you can go, and the workmen will then begin on the rebuilding."

The butler gave this a brief consideration.

"I understand," he agreed casually. "Anything more?"

"Not at the moment," answered Geoffrey.

For a moment he stood watching the thickset figure move stolidly away toward the bend of the hall, satisfied that he had said nothing to rouse suspicion. Then he pushed open the salon doors and stepped inside.

Mechanically he moved towards the window and, pushing aside the delicate lace curtains, stared into the street below. Then with a sudden interest he fixed his eyes on a roughly clad laborer in the narrow parkway, at that moment hoisting a ladder against one of the chestnuts. On the ground beside him lay a canvas bag of implements. An odd time of year to clip the trees, reflected the watcher. Then it dawned on him that in all likelihood this inconspicuous workman was one of the persons employed to surround the house. If so, the inspector had been commendably prompt.

The knocker outside shattered the silence, and Geoffrey hastened into the hall, only to find Eduardo there before him in the act of admitting Inspector Bazin and two supernumeraries.

"Any news, monsieur?" inquired the officer expectantly.

"None. She has not come back."

The blond countenance expressed surprise.

"I confess that astonishes me. Well, then—we will proceed."

In a few words he dispatched his men on their business of searching the premises, having first demanded the keys to the cave, which the butler promptly produced. His manner toward Eduardo was affable, creating the impression of enlisting assistance.

"What was your first intimation of last night's trouble?"

For a second the butler's glance flickered in the Englishman's direction. Was there something furtive about it, or had Geoffrey's imagination become overacute?

"I waked up with the maid shaking me. She was screaming out that madame's room was on fire, that she had tried to put it out, but——"

"And on your way to your mistress' room did you hear any sort of noise?"

Eduardo hesitated, thought a moment, then to Geoffrey's surprise said: "A moment later I did."

In spite of himself the young man leaned forward eagerly, his eyes on the heavy face. The inspector went on calmly:

"Indeed! What did the noise seem to be?"

"Some one was beating on this door here, nearly breaking it in. I've told all that to M. l'agent here," he added. "It was a gentleman from the third floor who was crossing the court, saw the flames through the window, and came up to wake us. While the maid and I tried to get madame out he ran down the avenue and gave the alarm."

"Ah—so it was he who gave the alarm? I did not know that."

"Yes—first he had a go at the telephone, but the line was dead."

Good Morning!

This picture has several bright moments—i. e., the idea behind the story, the performance by Richard Tucker, and one or two bits of dialogue that make you feel hopeful of more like them—which fail to materialize. Otherwise "Safety in Numbers" registers as slow music that won't do a thing towards increasing the popularity of young "Buddy" Rogers.

The star is seen as a youth about to inherit a large sum or money, who is sent by his wise uncle-guardian [Mr. Tucker] to see the sights of New York on a modest allowance before he has unlimited funds to throw around.

Uncle knows three Follies' girls whom he feels he can trust [for a generous consideration] to guard his boy from pitfalls. The story then is concerned with the doings of William Butler Reynolds, his gorgeous nursemaids and the miscellany following in the latters' train.

Mr. Rogers plays some instruments, sings a bit and is naïvely boyish as usual, but his endearing young charms don't take as well in this piece as they have in others. His three leading ladies are stunning but itless. Roscoe Karns and Louise Beavers do the best that could be done with their respective rôles of taxi driver and maid. Staging is rather effective, but—summed up—"Safety in Numbers" seemed to me a strained effort for an effect that isn't achieved.

See you soon.

3 New York Blocks to Be Wrecked for Amusement Center

[Copyright: 1930: By the New York Times.]

New York, June 16.—The demolition of three square blocks between 48th and 51st streets and 5th and 6th avenues will begin this fall, according to a statement issued today for John D. Rockefeller, Jr. and a group headed by the Radio Corporation of America, which will erect on the tract a great distributing center of entertainment.

The new center is to be completed within three years as an architectural unit through which 49th and 50th streets will run in underground boulevards, while the three square blocks of surface are occupied by two buildings with a garden plaza between them, parallel to 5th avenue.

The design includes subterranean parking space and a parking tower; provision for shops on the 5th avenue level of the oval building, and for a bank on the first floor, as well as a restaurant on the roof, surrounded by an outdoor promenade. The boundary streets will be widened.

As previously reported, the center is to contain a variety theater seating 7,000 and a sound motion picture theater seating 5,000, as well as theaters for musical comedy and legitimate drama, and there is "under consideration" a symphony hall. All are to be equipped for broadcasting.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Question.

Will the Lingle murder be solved?

The Answers.

George Coval, 1330 South Kedvale avenue, printer—No. People who may have seen the actual shooting, of which no doubt there were many, will be afraid to say anything because of the consequences suffered in previous cases where witnesses knew too much. Who ever committed the deed was well versed in the art of killing.

Miss Charlotte Pyle, 2348 North Clark street, beauty parlor operator—Yes, I believe that THE TRIBUNE will use every power to clean up this murder and will not rest until it has run down every clue. It is a shame that a newspaper man had to be killed, but his murder probably will be the cleaning up of the town and its gangsters.

Eddie Gilmartin, manager room, Sheffield and Belmont avenues—I am afraid that it is one of those things that will be hard to solve, but it will at least rid the city of its bad element for a while. It is good to know that every agency of clean government is giving a hand to have this deed solved.

Charles Schultz, announcer, station WBBM—It will be a hard one to solve, but I believe that if those who have pledged their assistance will stay with the job they may get somewhere. The police will no doubt work on this one harder because a legitimate citizen was killed, whereas where gangsters are concerned it made no difference.

Miss Addie Hicks, 667 Cornelia avenue, secretary—Yes, I believe this murder will be cleaned up because I think that gangland's code has been violated and that the gangsters will turn the guilty one up. Killing of a newspaper man has brought too much "heat" on them.

Dr. W. M. Sherin Gravely Ill; Stricken Suddenly

Dr. W. Morley Sherin, 7405 Crandon avenue, is dangerously ill at the Jackson Park hospital, where he is a member of the staff. He was stricken suddenly Sunday afternoon.

Einstein Tells New Theory of Space Reality

Chicagoans Hear Scientist Explain Thesis.

BERLIN, June 16.—(AP)—Several thousand power celebrities, including some 200 Americans, meeting today for the purpose of determining upon methods by which the power of the world may be turned more fully to the service of mankind, heard Dr. Albert Einstein, famed theoretical physicist and author of the theory of relativity, unfold his newer thesis of the reality of space.

The great German scientist uttered his new theory for the first time publicly in his own land. He said its essence was that space, birthplace of all matter and thought, having been brought into reality by Sir Isaac Newton, has in the last few decades "swallowed up the ether and time and is about to swallow up the field and corpuscular theory, too, so that space will remain as the only theory representing reality."

All ideas of light, time, the ether and related phenomena, the scientist declared, will be absorbed in the all-inclusive concert of space.

He said the theory had "eliminated from the ether the last vestige of materiality."

Dr. Einstein's hearers, with the exception of the scientists, seemed unable to comprehend his words and so he went over some of his exposition, so that his new theory might be made "perfectly clear."

The space idea was the one he said recently he had evolved while ill in bed. If one compared two elements in space they were regarded only as to size. He said there was a further element: "You can also compare those elements in the matter of direction."

Space, Dr. Einstein said, must be regarded as primary and matter as secondary, being derived from it. His new theory holds that space, having originated matter, now has turned around and is eating it up—"having its revenge."

In his early remarks Prof. Einstein said:

"While it is illogical to rely upon the senses and their reactions, for building up a theory of the physics of the universe, nevertheless, since men are human, all theories must be based in some degree upon the experiences of their senses."

Then tracing the history of geometry from the Greek conception of the relative positions of solid bodies built on a few elements such as the point, the plane, the line and distance, and the modifications introduced by Descartes with his idea of continuous space, by Newton's ideas on gravity and acceleration, and by the study of light and the electro-magnetic field by Faraday and Maxwell, Dr. Einstein went on to explain how his special theory of relativity established the fact that space and time must be united in a single four-dimensional continuum. Dr. Einstein's theory postulated that time and space are not the vessel for the universe but could not exist at all if there were no bodies contained in them.

"A complete relativity theory," Dr. Einstein said, "must embrace all Gaussian [magnetic measurement] and coördinate systems in a four dimensional space. Space thus loses its absolute character.

"It is changeable and can be influenced. It is analagous in structure to the electro-magnetic field."

Until Dr. Einstein developed his relativity theory it had been believed that time and space existed of themselves, even if there were nothing else, no sun, no moon, no stars.

Among the Americans named as delegates to the conference were the following Chicagoans: W. L. Abbott of Commonwealth Edison company; James H. Buel, Middlewest Utilities company; Stanton B. Cushing, Public Service Company of Northern Illinois; Gustav Egloff, Universal Oil Products company; G. W. Hamilton, Middlewest Utilities company; L. F. Harza, consulting engineer; Samuel Insull, president of Commonwealth Edison company; Glen B. Kersey, Commonwealth Edison company; Lewis K. Malvern, Elgin Watch company; Raymond D. Maxson, Public Service Company of Northern Illinois; William S. Monroe, president of Sargent & Lundy, Inc.; Wensel Morava; Homer E. Niesz, Commonwealth Edison company; Arthur L. Rice, editor of Power Plant Engineering; D. N. Roper, Commonwealth Edison company; and Charles B. Scott of Middlewest Utilities company.

THE STAGE

THE play dealing with Napoleon which Lee Shubert secured in Germany for the use of the Dramatic League of Chicago or otherwise is along the lines of fantastic modernism. Mr. Shubert regards it as the most original comedy he has seen for years.

The story begins in a waxworks show, after hours. The characters come to life and Napoleon is among them. He hears that the league of nations is considering the establishment of a United States of Europe and decides to take a hand in the game. He goes to Geneva; he meets a motion picture actress who is to play Josephine in a production that has been delayed because the actor cast for the rôle of Napoleon has disappeared. He steps into the rehearsal and makes himself a nuisance by insisting upon historical and military accuracy in every detail. Disillusionments and rebuffs meet him everywhere—especially from the cinematic Josephine. Finally he returns to his waxworks job, disgusted with modern life and women.

All of which sounds as if it should be highly amusing. Certainly the piece is a departure from the old style Napoleonic dramas with which the shelves of libraries are cluttered. The German title is "Napoleon Grieft Ein."

The names of Frederick and Fanny Locke Hatton appear upon the copious bulletins of the Dramatic league in the authors' department. They are adapting "The Woman in the Clouds," a comedy by Rudolph Lothar, the Viennese writer who has already given us "The Werewolf," "The Duchess of Elba," and "The Command to Love." Their rewriting of the translation will have a new title.

The Hattons made their debut as dramatists in 1918, when "Years of Discretion" was staged at Powers' by David Belasco. They were then collaborative dramatic critics—perhaps the only "team" that ever reviewed plays matrimonially in the history of journalism. Other plays of their authorship that have been acted here were "The Call of Youth," "The Song Bird," "Lombardi Ltd.," "Upstairs and Down," "The Great Lover" [in collaboration with the late Leo Ditrichstein], and "Treat 'Em Rough." The last named play was acted at the Harris theater at the opening of the 1926-'27 season with Genevieve Tobin and Allan Dinehart in the leading rôles.

Jane Cowl, who added "Jenny," by Margaret Ayer Barnes and Edward Sheldon, to the Chicago playbills of the last season, will have a new management and at least two new "vehicles" next season. She will appear in a New York repertory season projected by Kenneth Macgowan and Joseph Verner Reed in Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night" and "When Hell Froze." The latter piece is the work of Norva Mitchell and Wilbur Daniel Steele, who write excellent and often prize winning short stories.

The columnists of the New York newspapers are being seduced into vaudeville engagements with frequency. Heywood Broun started the big parade a few weeks ago. Then Mark Hellinger enlisted for a "hitch" on the Loew circuit. Walter Winchell is the latest recruit; he will contribute [in person] to the bill at the Palace, New York, during the week of June 28.

1,475 Graduate at N. U.; Told Rules of Life

Dr. Ruthven Warns Class Battle Is Ahead.

A record graduating class of 1,475 at Northwestern university yesterday was warned in the commencement address that the "big man of the campus," the popular girl or boy, or one most successful of student activities was not destined by reason of those achievements alone to be a success in life.

"One may leave college with an encyclopedic knowledge," Dr. Alexander G. Ruthven, president of the University of Michigan, said in the address, "with the contacts of the successful politician, the social graces of the Chesterfieldian and the technique of the most skilled workman.

"He may be popular with his fellow man, have the reputation of a big man on the campus, and promise to be successful in his profession. Still, he may have failed conspicuously to receive what we hoped to give him."

Facts are chiefly useful "as source material in instruction in proper methods of reasoning," and seldom can college friendships be of sufficient benefit to justify the expense of a university education, Dr. Ruthven said. But if the university graduate qualifies in four tests, he said, he is on the way to becoming educated. Those four he enumerated as:

1. "If you have an incentive to study and a determination always to be an intelligent being, understanding that there is much more to be known in the world than is now known by you.

2. "If you have a serious realization that you are part of a social organization, that the golden rule is an ethical law of deep biological significance, and that selfish individual aggrandizement is unsocial.

3. "If you have learned the necessity of acting upon accurate, properly digested information instead of emotional impulses, and to look for values instead of accept them."

4. "If you develop a conception of reality and an orientation toward nature, thus gaining the peace of mind of a thinking person who has developed a satisfactory philosophy."

Northwestern's class was larger by 100 than last year's record class. All of the schools of the university presented candidates for degrees, the college of liberal arts leading with 359. The graduate school presented more candidates for higher degrees than, ever before, 18 receiving the advanced degree of doctor of philosophy; 80, master of arts; 23, master of science, and 5, master of science in journalism.

Thirty-nine nurses from the Evanston hospital and 46 from Wesley Memorial hospital received diplomas as graduate nurses; twenty-eight, as dental hygienists. Twelve members of the R. O. T. C. received reserve commissions in the United States navy; 22 in the army.

Anna Herthe Rothe, 7120 Merrill avenue, and Virginia Katherine Huss, 5941 Superior street, were awarded the George C. Bastian honor keys in journalism.

Dr. Ruthven received the honorary degree of doctor of laws, as a "leader of scientific expeditions, producer of scientific research." Others upon whom honorary degrees were conferred are:

Silas H. Strawn, lawyer and civic leader, doctor of laws; Gen. Abel Davis, vice president of the Chicago Title and Trust company, doctor of laws; Olin Hanson Basquin, Chicago engineer, former professor of engineering at Northwestern university and one of the organizers of its school of engineering, doctor of science; William Boyd, former student at the university, one of the organizers of the Y. M. C. A. of Evanston, former advertising manager of the Curtis Publishing company, master of arts; Gotthelf Carl Huber, dean of the graduate school of the University of Michigan, doctor of science, and Thomas Joseph McCormack, principal of the La Salle-Peru Township High school, doctor of laws.

Schoolgirls Making Own Dresses for Graduation

The girl graduates of Chicago public schools will not have to face the old bugaboo of the expensive graduation dress this year, according to Frances L. Swain, director of household arts in the public schools. This year a majority of the girls are making their own dresses of simple materials in sewing classes, and are using accessories already in their wardrobe. The average cost has been found to be $20 or less.

"Air Widow" Avoids Lonely Hours by Study Courses

BY DORIS BLAKE.

Do you remember Betty's complaint, the other day, about her air-minded husband who couldn't see his young bride for aviation study? All the young husband's evening hours were devoted to books, magazines and newspaper articles on the popular theme of air travel. Betty felt widowed without the advantage of being able to be up and about getting another husband.

"Iris," who might easily have been a sister in misery to Betty, if she weren't made of clearer thinking stuff, because her husband, too, has taken up aviation in a large evening way, offers a suggestion for "air-widows." The suggestion might just as well include all young wives with ambitious husbands.

Iris' husband does not sit at home devouring air magazines and books, but goes to school three nights a week. The other nights he stays home and catches up on sleep.

"At first," Iris confides, "I did not know what to do. I wanted him to do the things that interested him, but it was no fun, either, to sit home alone or watch him sleep. So I did neither.

For years Iris had had a desire to write, but felt she needed instruction, so she enrolled at an evening school for two nights a week.

"By the time I had that going pretty well, I heard of a tap-dancing class and I joined that," Iris continues. "I was just as tired out nights at home as my husband, and was glad to take a book to bed and read until I fell asleep. Believe me, I spent no time watching his sleep.

"Because I am busy with my own interests my husband does not have to fear that I will start to wail about being left alone. If he wants to get anywhere he has to study and since I expect to enjoy the privileges of it later, I'm not going to be a wet blanket now. We have good fun telling each other all about it. He reads what I write and criticizes it and I read enough about aviation to be able to understand what he tells me.

"I have gained a good deal during the last year and I feel one hundred per cent better than I did when we spent our evenings playing cards at someone's house or at the movies, coming home tired with nothing to show for the time spent. Now, an evening playing cards is a novelty and to sit and gossip with friends, a treat. Best of all, school opens in the fall. Some day we will fly together and, who knows, I may get a story accepted."

William Gillette Honored.

Bartford, Conn., June 16.—(AP)—William Gillette, East Hadlyme, Conn., creator of the stage rôle of Sherlock Holmes, today was awarded an honorary degree of master of arts at the 104th commencement exercises of Trinity college.

DORIS BLAKE ANSWERS

Painful Situation.

"Dear Miss Blake: How can I leave my boy friend without hurting him, as I love another? RENEE."

If he likes you, no matter how tactfully you handle the situation, it will hurt.

It's Up to Him.

"Dear Miss Blake: I love a girl but am too bashful to ask her to go out. Please advise. ROBERT."

She'll not suspect your fondness for her unless you act, Robert. Speak up.

WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Clark Spitzer of Oak Park have issued invitations for the marriage of their daughter Helen Elizabeth, to Wardell Nelson Cronwall, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Cornelius Cronwall, also of Oak Park, to take place tomorrow at 8:30 p. m. at the Spitzer residence. Only close friends and relatives are to be present. A reception at the Oak Park Country club will follow the ceremony.

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

Ever Ready Role.

Recently I was playing in a loop play as one of the "extras," in the mob scene. In this scene we waved our hands and shouted "hail," at certain intervals of the play.

One Sunday night there was no performance so a friend and I decided to go to a movie. Our choice was "Captain of the Guard."

From force of habit—in the first mob scene of the picture—I unconsciously waved my hand and gave a lusty "hail," much to the amusement of the rest of the audience. I could not sink low enough into the seat after that. M. M. B.

Bright Sayings of the Children

The doctor of a country village had two children who were acknowledged as being the prettiest little girls in town. While the two children were out walking one day they passed quite near two small boys; one lived in the village and the other was a visitor.

"I say," said the visitor, "who are those little girls?"

"O, they are the doctor's children," replied the village boy. "He always keeps the best for himself." M. H.

Betty M'Nair Becomes Bride of Sims Today

BY THALIA

The wedding of Miss Betty McNair, daughter of Frank McNair of 1430 Lake Shore drive, and Frank Smith Sims, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin W. Sims of 112 Bellevue place, is the newest and most important on today's calendar. The service is to be read at 4:30 o'clock at St. Chrysostom's church, and a wedding reception to be attended by several hundred guests will follow at the Blackstone hotel.

Miss Caroline McNair is to be her sister's maid of honor, and the matron of honor will be Mrs. Walter Sanger Bowman. The bridesmaids are Miss Helen Shimmin, Miss Priscilla Sims, sister of the groom's sisters; Miss Edith Bowser, Miss Joy Fletcher of Philadelphia, and Miss Faye Rattenbury of New Britain, Conn. George F. Goetz Jr. is to be best man for Mr. Sims, and the ushers are Edwin W. Sims Jr., John W. Gammie of Great Neck, L. I.; Henry Coffin of Ann Arbor, Francis Kleutgen, William Miller, and Allen Bentley.

Mr. Sims and his bride are to go to Honolulu for their wedding trip, and after their return will go to the Sims' cabin in northern Michigan to remain until Labor day. They plan to be with Mr. McNair until their apartment at 73 East Elm street is ready for them, and are to be at home there after Nov. 1. Mr. McNair gave a bridal dinner for the wedding party at his apartment last night.

Mrs. William McCormick Blairs' lovely early American house at Lake Forest is to be opened today and tomorrow for an Ell Bates sale. Most of the smart young matrons who are "in the country" for the summer are to assist as saleswomen, and Mrs. Blair is to entertain them at luncheon. The hours for the sale are from 10 to 6 o'clock. Assisting will be Mrs. Donald Ryerson, Mrs. William E. Clow Jr., Mrs. John Borden, Mrs. Donald B. Douglas, Mrs. Lester Leland, Mrs. Philip Armour, Mrs. Charles Deering, Mrs. Farwell Winston, Mrs. Harold Clow, Mrs. James Hutchins, Mrs. J. Andrews King, and Mrs. Arthur Cable.

For the benefit of persons who have received announcements of the next ball of the Vocational Society for Mid-Ins, we have been asked to state that the sale is to be held on Friday of this week, instead of on Wednesday, as indicated on the announcement cards. It is to be held at Mid Oaks, the residence of Mrs. Linda Evans in Barrington. The women in charge include Mrs. James H. Cardwell, Mrs. Frank H. Johnston Jr., Mrs. Marvin E. Miner, Mrs. James E. McMurray, Mrs. Clifford Morris, Mrs. Edwin A. Seipp, and Mrs. George Van Dusen Jr.

Some of the women and children who are to ride in the Lake Forest horse show on Friday and Saturday of this week at Onwentsia appeared yesterday afternoon for a sort of preliminary tryout in the show ring. The entrants will include the Robert R. Thornes' daughter, Narcissa, Mrs. Caleb B. Judah, Miss Edith Behr, Mrs. Lawton Harvey, Miss Edith Cummings, Mrs. Samuel J. Walker, Miss Frances Richardson, Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen Jr., and her daughter, Gwendolyn Bowen.

The annual field day exercises of the Northwestern association of Delta Kappa Epsilon are to be held on Wednesday, June 25. The program will follow the customary order of events. Luncheon and dinner are to be served at the Lake Geneva Country club; there will be a boat ride in Brother Tracy C. Drake's yacht, Aloha, at 11 o'clock, with a stopoff at Yerkes observatory, where Brother Director Edwin B. Frost will show the workings of the immense telescope; and also the regular handicap golf tournament.

Chicagoans who landed in New York City on the S. S. Europa last Friday include Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Calhoun Smith [Edwina Litsinger], who are returning from their honeymoon; Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Reed of 12 Scott street, the Kellogg Fairbanks, who have been visiting their daughter, Janet, in Paris, and Prof. and Mrs. William Nitze, who are returning from a trip of several months, during which time Dr. Nitze was a guest lecturer in continental universities.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl G. Bingham of Highland Park and their sons, Carlton and John, are to sail on the new S. S. Empress of Japan from Quebec on June 24. They are taking their car and are to motor in England, Britain, and Holland.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Matthias, who departed last October for a long trip through the orient, have returned and are in Chicago for a month, staying at the Drake hotel. Later in the summer they plan to take a house in Santa Barbara.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED

[Moffett Photo.]

Mr. and Mrs. Sims McGuire of the Ambassador East announce the engagement of their daughter, Eileen, to Ralph Mills, son of Mrs. Herbert Mills of Oak Park. Miss McGuire attended Sacred Heart academy, the Chicago Latin school, and Manhattanville. She is a member of the board of directors of the Service club, and also an officer of the Lighthouse Volunteer Aids. Mr. Mills attended Notre Dame and the University of Illinois. The marriage is to take place in September, and Mr. Mills and his bride are to reside in one of the north shore suburbs after a European honeymoon.

NEW YORK SOCIETY

New York, June 16.—[Special.]—Members of hunting circles, which include a large proportion of Long Island south shore social colony, are deeply interested in the announcement of the resumption of annual race meetings at the Southampton Riding and Hunt club. The meet will take place on July 12, under the auspices of the Suffolk Hounds.

One of the most important of the group of young women who will be introduced to society next winter is Miss Florence Baker, who is returning within the next fortnight with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George F. Baker Jr., after having passed the last winter in school in Paris.

Another young woman who will make her debut in the autumn is Miss Katharine Van Duzer Lawrence, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dudley B. Lawrence. She will be presented at a supper dance which her parents will give for her on Nov. 15.

Walden Gallery in Palmolive Building Will Open Today

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

A new gallery opens today. The Walden Book shop, which already is represented among our galleries by its attractive Walden-Dudensing gallery on Michigan avenue and by a smaller gallery on Plymouth court, is fathering the new gallery in the Palmolive building, a little gallery for the showing of paintings and timely exhibitions of the graphic arts.

The first exhibition is hung today. It is delightfully varied, including a set of lithographs by George Bellows, water colors by Jean Paul Slusser [Mr. Slusser is a professor in the art department of the University of Michigan], water colors by Phil Nesbitt [among them new ones painted on his Hawaiian trip], and rugs from the studio of Ralph Pearson made from designs executed by Winnold Reiss, Henriette Reiss, Emily Reist, George Biddle, Buk and Nura Ulreich.

This is a fair example of what the new gallery plans to be—a gathering place for the younger artists and for those of the older whose work has not become prohibitive in price. The gallery hopes to become a mart for the Chicago artist whose grief it is that Chicago art is not saleable in Chicago, a grief, we may add, which is not always justified. There are numerous artists extremely successful in placing their work here. The new gallery contends, with justification, that art not saleable in Chicago is scarcely more so elsewhere, as taking it all in all the Chicago purchasing public is catholic in taste and as discriminating as the public of any other metropolis.

The new Walden gallery will go frequently outside of Chicago for material. It will chose the best for its exhibits wherever it can find the best, from Europe, from our eastern states and from our western. Its modern collection embraces such men as Klimpt, Zulow and Schiele from Austria; Thevenet, Chagall and Laboureur from France; Sterenberg from the Moscow academy in Russia; and among Chicagoans, Helen West Heller, Stanley Crane, Beatrice Levy and Milton Douthot.

Reproductions of modern paintings will be another interesting feature. Cezanne, Van Gogh, Gaugain, Kokoschka, Kisling, Manguin, Pechstein, Carra and Rousseau are among the artists who can be studied in this way. Also artists who are known here chiefly in black and white, but whom one would like to know better in color.

Rudimentary Idea of Food Values Is Essential to Health

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Yesterday we were saying that one great beauty need of women is a more comprehensive understanding of their food needs. The effect of wrong diet does not show itself at once. Months or a year may elapse before the effects are noticeable in a sloughing off in looks.

We have the word of a noted authority that the years between 30 and 40, which should be the best years, are often the worst with the sins of diet showing their signs of deterioration. If you don't care about the state of your health, you do care about the state of your face, your hair, your teeth, and your youth. If you are a woman you do.

You've cared enough about your looks to learn what your complexion should be fed and how your scalp should be nourished to keep them in the pink of condition. Now, we want you to recognize fully that lowered vitality and early ageing will go on in spite of your beauty lotions unless you cater to the food needs of your body.

You've heard about vitamins and about proteins and carbohydrates. In a vague sort of wa yyou know they're good for you. But do you know how and why? Do you know what these beautiful body essentials are extracted from?

Do you know that minerals are secured from vegetables, fruits, and fish, and that they are the most important single dietary protection against disease? That lack of minerals in the diet affects bones and teeth, impoverishes the blood, produces anemia?

That protein is secured from milk, eggs, meats, fish, cheese, grains, and nuts, and that protein is the body builder and tissue repairer?

That carbohydrates upon which bodily vigor depends are obtained from cereals, sugar, starches, vegetables, fruits, and milk products? And that without sufficient carbohydrates "that tired feeling" appears?

About fats, of course, you are familiar. Butter, oils, lard, cream, pork, sausage, olly nuts must be used in healthy proportion for bodily heat and energy. Vitamins, which are secured from certain foods in all groups, if missing from the diet, will cause nerve disorders and general debility.

Food Talk.

A generation or so ago the making of a perfect cup of coffee was thought an art. Now it is known to be a science. With this change of opinion has come a change in standards for the perfect cup. The best coffee was once black and strong. Now it is so clear that one can almost see the bottom of the cup. But still it is strong. Connoisseurs strive to obtain a clear chestnut color—one that leaves an amber stain—a beverage of good strength without bitterness and, most of all, one full of fragrance.

The desirable qualities of the beverage are locked within the coffee berry, itself. So, more knowledge about the composition of coffee would help us to be more successful in the making of the beverage.

Just remember these few simple things and you will soon be making better coffee. Coffee contains oils that volatalize in cooking. It also contains caffeine, a stimulating substance that vaporizes in boiling. And it has inert materials that dissolve in water. One of these soluble constituents is tannic acid, the astringent, bitter substance we taste in coffee when it is boiled too long.

The oils give flavor and aroma, and so does the caffeine. Coffee begins to lose its flavor and fragrance soon after it is roasted and the loss is especially rapid after grinding. Grinding, therefore, should always be done, when possible, immediately before use.

The grind of the coffee has much to do with the flavor. Coarse ground coffee requires long boiling to extract full strength. And actual boiling, as has already been pointed out, drives away the oils and caffeine, spoiling the flavor and aroma-and developing the bitter taste. A medium grind is best. Of course, the kind of grind one should use depends on the way the coffee is made. There are four methods of making coffee now in use—boiling, distilling or percolating, dripping and steeping.

History seems to show that the beverage was first made by boiling. Strange as it may seem, we have not outgrown this old method. Those who have most recently done research on the different methods of brewing coffee rank boiling as the second best for producing good results. Dripping is ranked first by excellent judges of coffee quality. Whatever our own method may be, we do know boiling continues to be a favored way with many people who serve excellent coffee and it is the method used by almost all of us when we go picnicking or camping.

In our own work on coffee, which covered a period of three months, we found the people judging our coffee liked the boiled coffee best when made in this way: A medium grind coffee of well known brand was put into cold water. About 1¼ level tablespoons of coffee were used to each cup of cold water to produce coffee of medium good strength. It was allowed to come slowly to the boiling point and was kept boiling for just a few seconds.

When it was boiled longer the aroma was gone and the bitter taste developed. The grounds were settled by adding a dash of cold water. The effect of this is to check the boiling and permit the liquid to become still so that the grounds may settle to the bottom. The coffee was always enjoyed most when it was served immediately after it was boiled.

Some other important things were learned in these experiments. The material of which the coffee pot is made has much to do with the flavor. Glass or porcelain pots were found to produce a much better tasting coffee than metal pots. Warmed over coffee was never liked. In fact, those who really enjoyed the good coffee thought the reheated beverage was not worth drinking.

Boiling the grounds the second time with a little fresh coffee produced disastrous results. Those who tried drinking this coffee were impressed with the truth of that old saying, "It is as impossible to make good coffee from grounds as it is to make a fire with ashes."

A talk on making coffee by other methods will come sometime later.

Do Food Values Interest You in Arranging Meals

The editor of the food page of THE TRIBUNE is interested to know if readers find a value in the calculations of food values expressed in calories such as have been printed in connection with her recipes for the last few weeks. Or, will the recipes without the calculations serve all necessities of the housewife?

Write your view on the subject so that a determination may be reached as to whether or not this service shall be continued. Address Meta Given, care THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago, Ill.

These Recipes Make Tomorrow's Meals Easier

ESCALLOPED POTATOES.

2 teaspoons salt.
Pepper.
¾ cup cheese.
1 cup top milk.

Boil potatoes in jackets until almost done. Remove skins and cut in ¼ inch slices. Arrange in a buttered baking dish in alternate layers, sprinkling each with salt, pepper and grated cheese. Repeat. Add milk, cover and bake in a slow oven [250 degrees F.] and cook until potatoes are tender.

Yield: 6 servings. One serving: Total—200 calories: protein, 23 calories; fat, 82 calories; carbohydrates, 95 calories.

CHERRY AND PEACH SALAD.

½ cup hazelnuts or almonds.
12 large halves canned peaches.
Crisp lettuce leaves.
12 ripe olives.
1 cup mayonnaise.

Carefully remove pits from cherries and replace with nuts. Put three or four stuffed cherries into the hollow of each peach half. Allow two halves for each serving. Arrange on crisp lettuce leaves. Garnish with two ripe olives and serve with mayonnaise. Yield: 6 servings. One serving: Total, 478 calories: protein, 19 calories; fat, 339 calories; carbohydrates, 120 calories.

COLESLAW.

¾ teaspoon salt.
Dash pepper.
1½ tablespoons sugar.
3 cups finely shaved cabbage.
3 tablespoons lemon juice or vinegar.
⅜ cup top milk or thin cream.

Add salt, pepper and sugar to cabbage. Add vinegar or lemon juice to milk, then to cabbage. Keep cold until ready to serve. Yield: 6 servings. One serving: Total: 36 calories: protein, 4 calories; fat, 7 calories; carbohydrates, 25 calories.

PRUNE WHIP.

2 cups cold water.
¾ cup orange juice.
2 tablespoons lemon juice.
2 tablespoons sugar.
1 cup whipping cream.

Wash the prunes quickly in cold water. Cover with two cups of water and soak several hours. Cook slowly for about 20 minutes in water in which prunes were soaked. Drain off the juice. There should be ½ cup. If not, make up with water. Cool the prunes and pit.

Keep the prunes whole. This will prevent the outside skin from coming through the ricer. Press only about ¼ the prunes at a time, using a potato ricer to press out the pulp. There should be one cup of prune pulp. Add the rest of the ingredients and stir thoroughly to dissolve the sugar.

Chill about 20 minutes in the refrigerator. Whip cream until stiff. Fold prune mixture lightly but thoroughly into the whipped cream. Chill thoroughly before serving. Yield: 8 servings. One serving: Total: 155 calories; protein, 3 calories; fat, 95 calories; carbohydrates, 57 calories.

WATERWAY VOTE IN SENATE MAY BE TAKEN TODAY

Illinois Project Is Only Unsettled Point.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 16.—[Special.]—The Illinois waterway controversy remained tonight as the only obstacle in the way of prompt passage of the rivers and harbors bill in the senate. Virtually all other amendments recommended by the commerce committee to the bill as passed by the house were approved by the senate today, clearing the decks for consideration tomorrow of the committee amendment relating to the Illinois waterway and the substitute proposed by Senator John J. Blaine [Rep., Wis.]

Senator Charles S. Deneen [Rep., Ill.] was confident that the senate would reject the Blaine substitute. Unless a filibuster develops the bill may be passed tomorrow.

May Adjourn This Weeks.

If this measure is disposed of tomorrow it is likely that the leaders will be able to carry out their program for the final adjournment of the regular session of congress on Friday or Saturday. A delay of a few days on the rivers and harbors bill will mean a postponement of adjournment until the middle of next week. The special session of the senate for consideration of the naval treaty will follow immediately after the close of the regular session.

Discussion during today's consideration of the rivers and harbors bill centered on the provision authorizing the federal government to take over the Erie and Oswego branches of the New York state barge canal. Senator A. H. Vandenberg [Rep., Mich.] said he saw no sound reason for the federal government to take over the canal, but that in view of the sentiment in the senate in favor of such action he is satisfied with the language of the committee amendment.

Amendment Is Approved.

Under the amendment it is stipulated that there is no intention to convert the barge canal into a ship canal or "to hinder or delay the improvement of the St. Lawrence waterway as the seaway from the great lakes to the ocean." The amendment was approved without opposition.

"If the Erie and Oswego canals are to be federalized at all this paragraph, with its proper prospectus, which gives them an appropriate barge status and leaves unimpaired the larger program for a St. Lawrence seaway, is satisfactory," said Senator Vandenberg. "It commits each project to its own logical sphere."

Senator Vandenberg expressed the belief that an agreement will be reached with Canada for joint development of the St. Lawrence waterway.

LLOYD GEORGE PLANS TO AID LABORITES TO SOLVE JOBLESS CRISIS

[Copyright: 1930: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, June 16.—Prime Minister MacDonald returned by airplane from his Scottish holiday tonight, and tomorrow, when parliament reassembles, he will read in the columns of his own party newspapers an offer which David Lloyd George, leader of the Liberal party, has made for coöperation of both parties to obtain a dependable parliamentary majority for emergency measures necessary to wage war on unemployment.

According to the Daily Herald, Mr. Lloyd George today declared that unemployment, which is now nearing the 2,000,000 mark, must be treated as a national emergency—as much an emergency as the situation that arose in the great war. His offer to Mr. MacDonald is to support the Labor government in an emergency session of parliament, "working under emergency procedure to pass emergency measures to deal with an unquestionable emergency in trade and employment."

In this special session, Mr. Lloyd George explained, the government would have to go further than either the Liberal party or the Labor party heretofore has suggested.

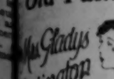
Some Commercial Substitutes for the Old Fashioned Play



Mrs. Gladys Huntington Berans

Information on "Sun Bathing for Baby" will be sent by Mrs. Berans on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

If you had: A big house in the country with an up and downstairs, a fancy kitchen, and a cellar and step floors, and all the equipment of a home—and a piece of land around it where there was earth for digging, a place for animals, occasional small lumber and big planks, little back and stairs, a workshop with a carpenter's bench, low fences to scale, trees to climb or hang and swing from as might find there almost all the equipment and material your children would need for real satisfying play.

But few of us have all that—and some that have don't know how to utilize it for their children. So it's up to us to provide our children with by means for all around play. And when small means and infinitely less than ideal conditions we can do so. The kind of plaything to be touched today is what we might call apparatus—though that is too high sounding a name when you consider how much a father or a clever mother can do with wood, nails, and a hammer. It must be mentioned that a few of these things can be managed better by a group than by individual mothers.)

Some of the apparatus which small children love because they enjoy balancing and using their big muscles in sliding and climbing are: The baby slide—or a slide of larger size; low double ladder—made by nailing strips of wood as steps on both sides of a carpenter's horse; merry-go-round; swinging ladder; climbing rope; swing—can be hung in a doorway; larger double ladder; horizontal bar; walking beam—first flat on floor, gradually raised at one end; parallel bars; ladder—properly secured or laid down; see-saw or rocking board or rocking seat, and sliding board.

Definite information as to where these pieces of apparatus may be obtained will be sent on receipt of stamped, self-addressed envelope.

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Smart Parisiennes are fond of the transformation ensembles that Paris couturiers are always devising for them. A frock that can turn from afternoon to evening through the removal of a jacket or from runabout to tea by the addition of a bertha is a great time saver to the social butterfly who has to flit so nonchalantly through the myriad vicissitudes of the Paris season, while to the woman of moderate means it adds the advantage of producing different effects from one initial expenditure.

Consequently, it is rare nowadays to find a dress totally devoid of spare parts with which one may vary its aspect and formality.

Worth designed the transformation sketched above for the Baronne J. de Ivtinchild, who is one of the smartest figures of all Paris. It has a long sleeved frock of black georgette made princess with a petal shaped hipyoke and front fullness added by means of a panel of unpressed plaits stitched to the knees. Then, there's a short sleeved bolero also of black georgette with a narrow collar of white georgette, that recalls the white georgette band edging the wide open sleeves of the frock which with long gloves makes the dress suitable for street wear on summer afternoons. Or a circular bertha of white georgette may be slipped over the head turning it into a stunning costume for more formal occasions. This bertha is mounted on a shallow yoke that is tied at the back of the neck with a bow of the georgette.
